—Linder Terrace is a new street almost unknown to the residents of Ward 7, put it now assumes some importance. For several years the Co. Pope estate has been on the market with the sole result of disposing of the land on Washington street. About a year ago Mrs. N. B. Walker took the remaining land and opened a street from Hunnewell avenue into the land, bringing six lots of moderate size upon the market. At present only one lot remains to be sold, and within the past two weeks two lots have been bought, one by Rev. Geo. W. Shinn and the other by Mr. F. A. Leeds of the Youth's Companion. Both will erect houses. The land is centrally located on elevated ground, commanding an extensive view towards the north. 'With the syndicates and Mrs. Walker's efforts Brighton Hill will soon be built up.

A Brewer's Outrage.

To the Editor of the Newton GRAPHIC:

Justice Brewer, a recent appointment of President Harrison to the United States Supreme Court, owes his elevation to Senator Vest, the leading liquor attorney of the country. He very soon exhibits a stupendous amount of impudence that justifies the severest criticism.
While a judge in Kansas he rendered two decisions that nullified prohibition in that state by deciaring that liquor manufacturers should be compensated, and that the legislature could not say what a man should eat or drink. But these foolish decisions were soon reof the United States Supreme Court only one judge, his uncle, Judge Field, dissenting. By President Harrison's foolishness and servility to the rum and foolishness and servility to the rum and beer barons this Judge Brewer now sits on the same bench with those judges who visited upon him so deserved a rebuke.

The once unknown Justice Brewer is now a big man and is invited to deliver the oration to the Yale College graduates. His subject was "Protection of Private Property from Public Attack." In that address he endeavors to poison the minds of those young men just entering the world of politics with the same pernicious fallacy he gave the people of Kansas. He insults his associates on the supreme bench by calling them "timid judges escaping the obligation of denouncing wrong in a case in which some supposed general and public good is the object of legislation." He goes on with that sort of drivel, slapping the United States Supreme Court in the face and virtually declares that its solemn and honest dicta are unworthy of notice, "being the refuge of timid judges."

Justice Brewer insults the yast majority of his own state, Kansas, who have proclaimed "that light on the large proclaimed "that light on its and the part of the large proclaimed "that light on its and the large proclaimed "that light on the proclaimed "that light on the proclaimed "that light on the same proclaimed "that light on the proclaimed "the proclaimed "that

majority of his own state, Kansas, who have proclaimed "that liquor is a nuisance and we shall prohibit it." And yet within a few weeks in a religious meeting, here in Newton, this same Judge Brewer was commended for attending Sunday school on his first Sabbath in Washington, as if that made a man fit for a position for which he evidently is totally unfitted. As the ermined attorney of the liquor interests he utters before college graduates heresies which many of these young men can reflute with half the thought he wasted in his studied notorious insult to the supreme why detail the sad facts. Isn't it insulting to your Christian and moral manhood to have your great party obeying the behest of the miserable saloon minority in it, because your scheming party managers feel sure that the loss of their vote will defeat your party? They ignore your silent majesty and prowess because they know you never bolt. They need your combined vote. They have received it thus far. Isn't it high time to assert your Christian and moral dignity? To break the base thraldom of party servitude that uses you for such base cards? Stop and think. Yes think! think!

Leamington, Eng., July 29, 1891. To the Editor of the GRAPHIC:

You again place me under additional obligation through your courteous explanation of my position upon the Mc-Kinley administrative tariff bill. Owing to its well meant zeal in the work of checking frauds in the importation of foreign merchandise, chiefly at the port of New York and largely by aliens, the 51st Congress permitted itself to be mis-led by the counsels of narrsw partizans, with the result of enacting a measure, with the result of enacting a measure, which though in the main excellent, yet has in it features of a character so restrictive as to be both inequitable and difficult of enforcement. Many of the best authorities on tariff administration see the need of changes in the act of last session, notably Col. Tichenor, president of the board of general appraisers, one of the best informed men in the country on such matters. The Boston Executive Business Association has instructed its committee on customs to investigate and report upon the working of the administrative bill, and if such inquiry should suggest the advisability of changes in the provisions of the act, it is to be hoped in the interest of fair legislation and of efficient administration that the 52nd Congress will develop a wider grasp of the requirements of the case than was shown by the last Congress in regard to this non-partizan question of tariff administration.

The orderly started on the run, and soon came baok and reported that the Colonel would be back in a minute. I and my brother then went out to look around and see if we could see any one we knew. The boys were scattered about on the grounds playing at tennis, base-ball and such sports. Some were dressed in uniforms and some were not. I soon came across a fellow from Newtonville that I knew, I said "Halloo, Brown," and began to ask him questions about the rules and regulations of the place. Soon an orderly-sargeant came up and said "Halloo Taylor, I looked around and saw another fellow from Newtonville, named Carter. These two boys I learned were in the same tent with another fellow, named Whiting. I therefore wanted to tent with them. As the number in a tent is four, there was room for me and they agreed to it. I saw that the Colonel had met my father, and I thought that I had better join them. I asked Sergt. Carter if he would go with me. As we went into headquarters I noticed that Carter took his cap off and put it under his arm, so I took my hat off too, but I didn't put it under my arm. The Colonel began as soon as I came in, to ask me questions. I answered them and then he said "you will be in Co. C." Co. A. was made up of the largest boys, Co. TWO WEEKS IN A MILITARY CAMP.

OR LIFE IN THE NATURAL HISTORY CAMP.

At WORKESTER.

[By a 15 Year-Old Néwton Boy.]

In the summer of 1890, I heard through my playmates of a military camp for boys in Worcester, Mass. A few of my mates went up there during that summer. I wanted to go, too, but my father thought it best for me to wait another year. I talked of it all through the winter, and tried to get other fellows to go too. I said I did not want to be the only new fellow up there from Newton-ville, but none of them would go because they were bound somewhere else, or something of that sort.

As the time drew near for the camp to open, which was the first of July, my father asked me which I would rather do, go up to camp or have a bicycle so that came near being the end of my going to camp.

A good many boys went up to camp and stayed through July and then they began to come home. When they got home I asked a good many questions about it and began to feel sorry that I had not gone up there. FAMINE OF THE FUTURE.

Possibilities of the Extinction of the Human Race by Starvation.

Mr. Ravenstein, a member of the British association for the advancement British association for the advancement of science, has been computing the probable increase of the human race on the earth. He arrives at the startling conclusion that in 182 years the density of population upon the globe will be such that the means of subsistence will be inadequate to its support. He estimates the population of the world of the present year at 1,468,000,000. He finds that the average increase every ten years is about 8 per cent.

The section of the country still open to colonization comprises parts of Africa.

about 8 per cent.

The section of the country still open to colonization comprises parts of Africa, North and South America, Australia, some outlying islands, the steppes and deserts. The total area of all the habitable lands in the world is over 46,000,000 of square miles. Of this area the fertile or comparatively fertile lands are over 28,000,000 of square miles, the bare grass lands or steppes 14,000,000, and the bare deserts 4,000,180 square miles.

To the steppes he allocates a population of ten to the square mile, and to the desert regions one to the square mile. The bulk of the population would, therefore, have to subsist on the 28,000,000 square miles of fertile lands. Comparing the density of population—in India 175 to the square mile, in China 295 to the square mile—he arrives at the conclusion that a world population of 207 to the square mile in the cultivable regions would be a fair estimate.

This 207 persons to the square mile will be reached in 183 years at the present rate of increase, when the total population of the cultivable area would be 5,550,700,000, and the total number the earth would feed 5,994,000,000.

Any further increase of population must either be provided for by a diminu-

Any further increase of population must either be provided for by a diminution of subsistence to each individual or by some improved mode of production, or by keeping down the future birth rate below the death rate. Mr. Ravenstein's statistical day not concern us of the present statistics do not concern us of the pres statistics do not concern us of the present generation very vitally. We can leave the solution to our great-grand-children. We have increased and multiplied very comfortably in spite of the lugubrious warnings of Mr. Malthus, and perhaps they also will multiply and increase in spite of Mr. Ravenstein.

If any race must go to the wall, it may be confidently predicted it will not be the white race. There will be a Darwinian survival of the fittest. The weaker races will disappear before the stronger. The Indian will ultimately vanish from this continent and the African the continent and the African this conti vanish from this continent, and the African in his native land bids fair to be

The tendency of population to the cities must also be taken into account in any comparison of people to areas of reasonable subsistence. Concentration in large towns always tends to increased productive in the concentration of the concentra tion within a wide circuit around them took within a wide circuit around them, especially in the line of fruits and vegetables. Mr. Ravenstein's speculations are plausible and his statistics suggestive enough, but the figures of today may be utterly falsified by the figures of 200 years hence. Many things may inter-range in the meantline to keep down nonyears hence. Many things may intervene in the meantime to keep down population or increase the food supply. The extinction of the race by starvation is a very remote contingency indeed, and Mr. Ravenstein's 182 years bid fair to stretch out indefinitely before that contingency occurs.—Baltimore Sun.

The jaws of the porpoise yield a superior quality of oil. When hung up in the sun it readily drips away into cans provided for the purpose, the quantity of oil thus procured, however, being not more than half a pint to the jaw. The oil from the blubber gives an excellent light and is in demand along the coast for lighthouse use. It has no offensive odor.

Porpoise shooting is followed at all seasons and in all kinds of weather. On a calm summer's day the porpoise may be heard blowing a mile or two away. Nine men out of every ten one meets, if the possessor of a watch, can safely be put down as carrying a cheap, unreliable combination of works and case some unprincipled tradesman has palmed off on him as a good watch and timekeeper. The tenth man, if he has purchased a really good watch and timekeeper from some reliable jeweler, has paid about 500 per cent. more for it than he should have done, and this is the very reason why the other nine men carry such remarkably bad timepieces. They cannot afford to pay the extra 500 per cent. herefore necessary to secure good works and a warranted case, and are therefore swindled.

BOSTON AMUSEMENTS.

BOSTON TREATHE—An elaborate production of "Evangeline" is promised at the Boston Theatre, and the first performance will be given to-morrow, Saturday evening. Mr. George Schiller, who has often impersonated Le Blanc in other cities, and won great success in the role, will resume the part here. Miss Hilda Thomas with a fine voice and graceful figure will be the Gabriel, and a fine Evangeline is promised in Miss Patti Stone. Mr. James S. Maffitt will be seen again in his original role, the Lone Fisherman. Mr. Edwin S. Tarr, without whom no cast of "Evangeline" is complete, will be seen in his old part. Mr. Ivin T. Bush will be the Catherine, Miss Estelle Clinton the Eulalle, and of Sadie Stephens the Felician. There will be a chorus of 50, and the costuming and staging will be notably fine. The box office will be opened on Saturday morning next for the regular business of the coming season. Parties desirous of securing special seats for the "Evangeline" performance can do so by mailing orders to the ticket agent. During the vacation period, many improvements have been made in Mr. Tomkin's popular play house. The balcony and dress circle have undergone alterations and other changes made which will add to the attractiveness of the interior.

GRAND OFERA HOUSE—Messrs. Proctor & Mansfield will reopen the Grand Opera House Saturday evening with a strong company in a sensational comedy drama called "The Midnight Alarm."

The play has been rewritten so it is stated, by Mr. Leander Richardson, editor of the Dramatic News and author of "The Nominee" and other successful plays. The story deals with the life of a fireman in New York city, and is said to be interesting, exciting and sensational. A real steam fire engine, drawn by well trained horses, will dash across the stage in answer to an alarm of fire. A number of novel seenic and mechanical effects are promised. The sale of tickets began yesterday at the box office, and prices will remain the same as last season. The usual evening and matinee performances will be given.

Themony Theathe—Dockstadter's minstrels will have the credit of being the first organization of its class to appear at the Tremont, and will open the season of 1801-2, Monday, Aug. 24. Mr. Dockstadter is one of the kings of parlor minstrelsy, and in his long career in New York proved how popular a refined entertainment could be made. COLUMBIA THEATRE—Work is progressing rapidly on the new Columbia Theatre, corner of Washington and Motte streets, and from the present indications the latest addition to Boston's list of handsome theatres will be ready for opening in September. Decorators and painters are beginning their initial work, as more or less plastering has already been done. The lofts are in place on either side of the stage. Plumbers, gasfitters and electricians swarm over the floor of the lobby with mosaic tiles, and the walls and ceiling throughout the house are to be covered with stereo-relief, a new device for panelling, composed of plaster of paris and asbestos, and thoroughly freproof. The house without and within is Moorish in character and design. Contracts for the gas and electric fittings were awarded during the week. The central chandelier, with possibly a single exception, will be the largest in the United States. In addition there will be four smaller chandeliers and over 150 three-arm brackets, under the calciums and in and about the boxes.

(From the Boston Herald.) A Disappointed Tariff.

It has been evident for some time past that the Republican party committed a that the Republican party committed a very grave blunder, in a political, no less than in an economic sense, in passing the McKinley tariff law. To say nothing of the tremendous advantage that it gave to the Democrats to have a measure of this kind adopted on the eve of an election—an advantage of which the outcome of last November's contest was a striking proof—the results thus far of an application of the law seem to have been singutally disappointing. In certain respects the restrictions imposed by it have operated differently from what had been operated differently from what had been anticipated by its most strenuous opponents. The effect of changes in the direction of free trade, that is, the entire removal of a tax, as for instance, in the case of sugar, can be predicated with tolerable certainty; but the effect of an increase in taxes which tends to complicate already complexed conditions, is something that can be determined much better after than before a practical experience.

Take, for example, the effect of the changes made in the wool schedule that are just now occasioning disgust, quite as much among the wool growers of Ohio as among those living in other parts of the country and having other, and almost antagonistic, interests. It was certainly assumed by Judge Lawrence and his associates in the Ohio Wool Growers' Association that the result of the imposition of this tax would be to restrict the importation of foreign grown wools and to add substantially to the price of the American grown article, and it was assumed by those who opposed this increase that this effect might be expected. But as a matter of fact, the importations of foreign grown wool of certain grades—grades which Judge Lawrence alleges come into competition with the American product—have been larger since the new law went into effect than during corresponding periods last year, while, curiously enough, the American grown wool, instead of being higher in price since the application of the increased tax, has had its market price reduced, and according to this same representative of the Ohio wool growers, is now selling at two or three cents per pound less than during the summer of 1890.

This is certainly not what the advocates of these increased duties called is now selling at two or three cents per pound less than during the summer of 1890.

This is certainly not what the advocates of these increased duties called for, and yet it seems to us that their disappointment in this respect, although they do not seem to think so, is shared in various ways by those whom they are growing to consider their enemies; that is, the eastern manufacturers. No doubt our New England woollen and cotton manufacturers were keenly alive to their own interests while the McKinley bill was under discussion; and, although the carpet manufacturers believe that they were unjustly treated in the preparation of the carpet wools schedules, their losses, it was assumed, were much more than made good by certain material advantages secured by the manufacturers of worsted and knit goods, and possibly by the manufacturers of certain finer grades of cotton goods. If, in consequence of these tariff chances, foreign competition was materially limited, and a larger and better market granted to the American producers of textile fabrics, it might be supposed that this change would quickly show itself in the dividends paid, or, if not immediately manifest in that way, would be discounted in the sales of manufacturing stock. But, if one will compare the quotations of the auction prices of the shares of our New England manufactories during the last two months with the prices at which these shares sold a year ago at this time, he will find that, on the whole, the tendency of values has been downward rather than upward.

sold a year ago at this time, he will find that, on the whole, the tendency of values has been downward rather than upward.

There are about fifty manufacturing corporations of the kind referred to whose shares are frequently sold at our semi-weekly auction sales, and, in going through this list, one is surprised to find that the quoted sales of their shares are, on the average, noticeably lower than they were a year ago. The deduction that can reasonably be drawn from this showing is that the change in the tariff in the direction of higher duties has failed to produce that business activity which was the ostensible reason formaking the change. If the manufacturing business of the country is less satisfactory, because less profitable, now than it was a year ago, it is absurd to say that our business success chiefly depends upon advantages secured by means of protected duties; for, whatever may have been said about the tariff of 1883, the McKinley bill was prepared under the auspices of those individuals and companies that were to be directly benefited. It was such organizations as our Home Market Club that agitated in favor of this change, and, when Congress had the matter under consideration, substantially prepared the schedules of taxes that were afterward embodied in the law. Those representing those private interests were intent upon making haw the properties of the substantially prepared the schedules of taxes that were afterward embodied in the law. Those representing those private interests were intent upon making hay be dead to the least hesitation in crowding upthe duties whenever they believed that such an increase would result to their advantage.

**Hounds find year and step on him as he lies across the threshold of the kitchen with the morning paper in his mouth terms in the law, those private interest to be directly benefited. It was such organizations as our Home Market Club that agitated in favor of this change, and, when Congress had the matter under consideration, and the matt wool because it was better adapted for the purposes of their business than the wool which the farmers in the central states of our Union had to offer. It has not been a question of sentiment, but the practical one of adapting means to ends; and among these importers and users of Australian wool have been a number of manufacturers who, in their ideas concerning protection, appear to be in close accord with the high protec-tionist wool grower.

After a brisk drive for an hour and a half we reach our destination, an old fashioned rambling "ranch house."

The hogs around the house and the pigs and chickens flying out of the kitchen door before the snapping teeth of a yellow hound; the old crazy barn leaning far over out of humb prepared at one correr by out of plumb, propped at one corner by live oak post; the cordon of baying hounds about us as we alight; the fences of brush around the "corn-patch" and the "general odor of mild decay" that seems to pervade the air. All these quickly noticed features of the scene about us, are enough to assure us that we have made no mistake,—we are certainly in the backwoods.

The house of three rooms is unpainted without, and unplastered, unpapered within. Boarded up and down with red-wood planks, with the "battens" off here and there, the air has free circulation day and night, winter and summmer, whether winlive oak post; the cordon of baying hound

An old-fashioned yawning fire-place in one corner, in front of which are some rawhide bottomed home made chairs.

A shet-gun and a rifle hung from hooks upon the wall. Everything is fresh, uncertainty with the solution of the wall. Everything is fresh, unconditioned and striking to who is acquaintee only with the to who is acquaintee only with the town the bountiful end to be decided and beans, hot biscuits and butter, fland, we sit down to a bountiful end to begin not degree and caffee, and after half an horized steady work feel able to begin not classified work of the steady work feel able to begin not classified work of the steady work feel able to begin not classified work of the steady work feel able to begin not classified and some one pany with our warm hearted host. So after doming some rough clothes armed with a shotsun aplece, we call the hounds and start of up the cannot for a day's sport. For there are plenty of silver-grey squirrels, qual, "coons" and an occasional deer to be found.

I say we will call the hounds, and as there are a few things to be said once and for all in regard to the backwoods' hound, I will group the results of my reflection and observation concerning this animal under the heading of "The Nature and Uses of the Backwoods' Hound,"

1. As to his nature. A hound is a long, slim, flexible, self-adjusting, double-acting, high-pressure, triple-expansion, appetite.

A hound is the incarnation of hunger, wretchedness and wee. If you would see the utterness of sorrow and grief gaze upon a lost hound, wet, cold, shrunken and silvering.

wretchedness and woe. It you would see the utterness of sorrow and grief gaze upon a lost hound, wet, cold, shrunken and shivering.

If you would see a living, breathing allegory of poverty, hard times, injured innocence, hard luck and blasted hopes, look upon a worn-out hound and reflect. If you would see guile, craft, cunning duplicity, sneaking servility and gnawing covetousness all in one package, watch a hound while stealing something to eat when he fancies himself unobserved. If you would realize what the "banshee" cry is in Ireland, or the Arizona Indian "death-lament," or the "suttee" wail of India, just slip up on a howling, lonesome, melancholy-minded hound at night, when the moon shines and the trees wave ghost-like arms on the mountain side. It will make you feel worse than Hamlet did when his father's ghost repeated the declamation out of the Fourth reader to him.

As to his appetite a hound is omnivorous for I have seen one that had been fed at various times the following articles:—watermelon rinds, sour plums, peach skin, egg shells, beef-bones, chicken feathers, old honey-comb, dried "jerkey," buttermilk, chicken-feed, grape-skins, bees-wax, cold potatoes, and a quart of cold tea!

2. As to his uses. A hound will lie under the stove until his hair begins to smoke, then come forth gaping and strething, run against the toddling infant and grab its bread and butter as it falls, and then sneak out to the barn and suck every egg there.

But to know fully all that is meant by the word "hound" you must own one yourself.

You must some day see your "dear little Bradde" lug home from the house of your incomplete duties whenever they believed that such an increase would result to their advantage.

According to the United States consult at Sydney, New South Wales, the exports of wool this year have been nearly three times greater than those of the previous season, and it is believed that, when the returns are made up for the year ending June 30, the exports will be found to have exceeded those of any year since the exportation of Australian wool began. It has been pointed out in our market columns that these importations have been in no way due, as has been asserted in Ohio, to a desire on the part of our woollen and worsted manufacturers to revenge themselves upon the American wool grower. They are simply the results of original years of our woollen and worsted manufacturers to revenge themselves upon the American wool grower. Corn as an Article of Food.

Corn as an article of human food attracted but little attention outside of the United States until brought before the world by the successive Corn Palace festivals of the past four years. It was largely with this object in view that the annual Sioux City Corn Palace Festival was inaugurated. Its effects in this particular line have awakened the world. A feature of the Paris exposition was a corn palace, decorated after designs furnished by artists in Sioux City. The many uses of maize were for the first time shown the people of Europe. At Edinburg, Scotland, Chas J. Murphy, of America, spent several months in endeavoring to educate that country to the use of American Indian corn as an article of food. The traveled man has observed the little variety of food there is to choose from. The white bread for the rich man in Germany, Belgium and other European countries, black bread for the peasant, man and beast sharing allke, are the two single varieties of breadstuffs found. That the United States can supply any foreign demand for corn no one will dispute. Iowa as the banner corn state has every reason to be foremost in the advocacy of corn as an article of food, and to this end the Corn Palace idea is perpetuated, and results in great benefit to the corn-producing countries of this nation. ### THE TAX LEVY.

The falling off in personal property as reported by the assessors is something of a surprise. The reasons are that several large estates, the most important of which is that belonging to the late R. M. Pulsifer, has been removed from Newton. Ward Six has lost one item of $100,000, by the sale of bonds, and a good deal of railroad stock has been disposed of by different parties, owing to the tight market, and the small returns from much of that class of investments. Then again there have been a number of heavy failures during the past year, in which Newton men were more or less interested and by which the returns of the assessors were lessened. It has not been a very prosperous year in the busi-ness world, for some reason or other, and Newton has suffered along with the business world generally. All these causes combined have operated to make a perceptible difference in the tax lists, and the lack of the usual increase in personal property is responsible for the increase of forty cents in the tax rate. The gain in personal property last year was $260,000, which was about the was $269,000, which was about the normal increase, while this year the gain was only $5,060.

There was a strong fight in last year's City Council to reduce the appropriations, but every reduction was vigorous-ly opposed with arguments that it was impossible to do the work demanded for less, and the result was the usual increase over the year before.

Nevertheless people in Newton demand their credit be it said, most of the tax-papers are willing to pay. No one would be willing to change the condition of things in Newton, with that of Watertown, for instance, even for the sake of deducting two or three dollars from the Fitteen dollars is not a very large in-crease over last year, or the year before, when the tax rate was $14.80 but it will not be wise to increase the rate much above $15, in the year succeeding this.

The City Council this year have kept within the appropriations made last year, in all but a few cases, whose aggregate cost would not add ten cents to the tax rate, so that the responsibility for the increase belongs to last year's city government.

The only way to lower the tax rate in Newton is to induce more people to come here, to encourage the building of more houses, and so increase our assets. The past spring at least one hundred more houses could have been rented in Newton alone, had there been any houses vacant, and at good prices. The same is probably true of most of the other villages. It is surprising that investors do not turn more to real estate, seeing the uncertainty of other property, for improved real estate is something that can not be destroyed by any railroad deals, or other devices that prove so disastrous, and with the advent of sewerage Newton ought to double its population within a very few years, and this would bring about low taxes.

THE resignation of Congressmen Rock-well, Cogswell and Walker, to serve on the polls of Newton the past year. the committee on resolutions at the Republican state convention, has excited a good deal of comment, and the reason they give has added to the sensation. According to report, they say that they believe the people should have a hand in running the convention, and in this they are certainly correct. There has been too much cut and dried work in the past, and it will be no damage if the resolutions are not all written up in advance. Many assume that their action is a re-flection on Congressman Lodge, who was appointed as chairman, and who often mistakes the state of Massachusetts for himself. He made this mistake in the redistricting contest, but found that the legislators had other views, and Mr. Lodge had to retire with considerable loss of prestige. The men of Massachusetts never took kindly to a political boss, and the three congressmen men tioned have greatly improved their standing with the people by their action. They evidently believe in leaving the convention untrammelled, and do not believe that it should be made the occasion of booming any man for United States Senator, or any other office. This year, of all years, the convention should be left free to follow the best policy and select the best men for state offices, without any dictation from congress-

Quay and Dudley have gone from the National Republican Committee, which is something to be thankful for, even if is something to be thankful for, even if the committee did try to lower themselves to the level of these men by their fulsome resolutions. They had an unenviable notoriety, and were a source of weakness to the party. Mr. Clarkson, who is Mr. Quay's successor, while by no means an ideal politician, is certainly no were then Senator Gorman and as no worse than Senator Gorman, and as the latter will probably be the head of the Democratic committee, it was probthe Democratic committee, it was probably thought best to get a politician of the same kind to fight him. Neither of the two has ever been charged with embezzlement, as was the case with Quay, and any kind of a moral improvement in the selection of men who are to manage politics is something to be thankful for. Mr. Roger Wolcott of this transhold have the seedlit of him the state should have the credit of being the first prominent Massachusetts Republi-can to denounce Quay and his methods. Ex Congressman Greenhalge has been explaining to a reporter why he did not support Mr. Crapo last year, and curiously enough it was because Mr. Cra-po's "merit, ability and dignity were unknown and unpublished." Mr. Greenhalge is certainly a curious, not to say a "fresh" young man, and to assert that he knew nothing of Mr. Crapo as late as a year ago would imply a good deal of inexcusable ignorance about the affairs of his state, in which Mr. Crapo has been a very prominent figure. The Lowell Congressman now thinks Mr. Crapo is "an undiscovered gold mine," "his worth is not known," but it may be said that every intelligent Republican in the state know Mr. Crapo's worth long ago. Mr. Greenhalge evidently should get a tutor and devote a few months to the effort to learn something about the men of merit in his own state.

THE BOSTON JOURNAL thinks the Maryland Democratic currency plank was a meaningless straddle. Outside of was a meaningless straddle. Outside of New England both parties seem to be inclined to fear losing votes by any con-demnation of the free-silver coinage folly, and the influence of the silver mining states, which secured the passage of the present ruinous silver law, will probably be fell; at the past National probably be felt at the next National conventions. These new silver states have some very important electoral votes, and an outspoken resolution against free silver would probably turn the scale against the party making it in any of the new states. The present silver law is so bad that believers in honest money can only feel thankful that it is no worse.

Ex-Gov. OLIVER AMES thinks Mr. Crapo will be nominated for governor, and that there will be no doubt of his election. He also thinks that Mr. Blaine Nevertheless people in Newton demand modern improvements of all sorts, first-class streets and sidewalks, ample protection against fire, and so on, yet all these things cost money, for which, to their credit be it said, most of the taxpapers are willing to pay. No one would be willing to change the condition. He also thinks that Mr. Bianus will be the next Republican candidate for president, if his health will permit, and that "there is no power on earth that can defeat him," as he would receive a large Democratic vote. Mr. Ames' views are interesting, but he makes rather startling assertions for a man that aspires to be a prophet. man that aspires to be a prophet.

> Draper and Frank H. Wright of Great Barrington are appointed committee on resolutions, to succeed Rockwell, Cogswell and Walker. Mr. Greenhalge never resigns anything and he evidently has no samples, about Coursessing Line. scruples about Congressmen directing state politics. The other three ex-Congressmen may now feel that they have been properly "sat on."

The veterans are enthusiastic over the coming tournament and it is the desire of the association that all veterans who are not now members enroll themselves at once. This will be the first public appearance of the Newton Association, and it should be worthy of the city.

NEWTON'S VALUATION.

A TOTAL INCREASE IN REAL AND PER-SONAL PROPERTY OF $1,368,835.

The increase this year was not alto-The increase this year was not alto-gether unexpected, in view of the large expenditures for the introduction of the sewerage system and extension of the water supply, besides large sums ex-pended for the new engine house and school building. The largest gain in real estate was in Ward 6, the increase being $225,500, and the smallest in Ward 1, where the gain amounted to $110,700

In Ward 1, the personal property valuation fell off $56,131 from last year's figures; in Ward 3, it fell off $22,350 and in Ward 4, $31,100. The number of polls and the items of real and personal valuation are given in the appended

The gain over last in real estate is $1,363,775; in personal property, $5,060; total gain $1,368,835. The total number of female voters according to the assessor screturns is 35. The figures furnish quite an interesting study and indicate pretty clearly the advantage of the block system of assessment besides showing large gains in taxable property, accounted for principally by new buildings and the cutting up into house lots of large tracts of land formerly bringing in small returns. There can be no doubt that Newton is on the eve of rapid development and within the next 5 years there will be some big gains in population and with it, of course, more buildings and homes as a factor in increasing the city's revenues. Considering the great advantages secured by residents and remembering the necessary large outlays of late, the rate of taxation is certainly not excessive and another year will undoubtedly find it less, probably not over $14 per $100.

Improvements in Boston Theatres.

During the vacation period the Boston playhouses have undergone extensive improvements and alterations which will render them still more attractive and convenient for the public. At the Tremont all the dressing rooms and stage hall ways have been repainted and decorated, and all the front of the house reornamented and retouched. Beside building and painting several new sets for stock scenery, Artists Charles W. Witham and R. B. Williamson and Master Carpenter Edwin Morse and assistants have been at work all summer on the "Cleopatra" and other scenery for the Bernhardt season, and the last sets are now on the Tremont Theatre paint frame. This scenery will far surpass the imported, not only in beauty, but in ease of handling, it having been constructed especially for travelling. The gorgeous barge will occupy, when packed for transportation, not more than one quarter-of the space consumed by the Porte St. Martin, like piece. There will be a great saving of time and trouble and a great gain in beauty of presentation in the use of the Tremont's sets.

The staff of the Tremont will remain practically the same as last season under Managers Henry E. Abbey and John B. Schoeffel, the latter being the resident manager.

Acting and stage manager, William side building and painting several new

On the first of July, this year, just $153 more than one half of the year's appropriation for city expenses had been expended, which is running things about as even as could have been done. The largest expenses are usually in the first half of the year, so that possibly some balances may be left on hand at the end of this year.

principal industry of the place as well as the church, and also through which passes all the supplies and products of the mill, including coal, etc.

including coal, etc.

For ten years it has been almost impassable with any degree of safety, but with great liberal public spirit in July the city entered upon and put one end of the street in as good condition as any piece of road in the county of which er are justly proud.

But what is done has made a fool of the rest, so to speak.

What we thought quite passable, now looks entirely out of place, which partin fact is directly in front of the mill and church aforementioned.

Why make two bites of a cherry? You will say the money is all spent. True, but I understand that there is $2500 appropriated for California street and $2000 for Watertown street which cannot be expended this year on either street on account of the sewer. Why not transfer one of these appropriations to Chapel street and finish that street so as to give one passable thoroughfare from Watertown street to California street, and thereby place the two ends in harmony and please the tax papers and save the poor dumb animals from torture another winter and spring.

Pardon me for presuming to dictate, but it surely looks to me, as a matter of business, to be for the best interests of the city as well as a great benefit to all concerned. Yours very truly,

A trouble with many enterprises started, is that they Produce nothing, they rest upon no useful thing. The No-Skam Stocking Company, offers all of the elements of business—Industrial, Commercial. Financial. Founded upon a scheme of patents, which amounts patented security, and this again upon a greatly improved method in the production adsuptly most profitable of all sures business—the stocking—the undertaking will easily rank among the most profitable of all sures business. On our winkle, not a thing of nonsense or humbug about it. "It stilke the skin—you can't kick it off—you'd never know 'twas on." Re-enforced at the help, ce and knee, and lightened under the joints to avoid chaffing, it is durable, comfortable and healthful. Every other stocking is made in pieces and of pieces. Here a thread passes into the machine and comes out a stocking substantially ready for use—amply fashioned in the process, with a genius and skill never before imparted to machinery—and all more quickly done, than any set of knitted pieces can be wrought into the similar garment, they were designed to compose. This is the unique stocking for Bicycle Riders and Sportsmen.

The rest of the month and until he returns in September, he will pass at Southampton, Long Island, at the ountry seats of some old colleve classmantes. Miss Bishop, his sister, is with him.

—Mrs. William S. Eaton, wife of President Eaton of the Newton Boat Club, gave a ver, I handsome "tea," notwithstanding the inclement weather of Wednesday, last week, on her husband's beautiful steam yacht Melissa, which lies off Marblehead neck, and from 2 to 6 the deck was thronged with a large number of cottagers. During these hours a delicious collation was served, and the entire affair, aside from being such a novelty, was a great success.

NEWTON LOWER FALLS.

-Mrs. E. E. Moody is confined to the house by illness.

-Bishop's mills are shut down at present for an indefinite time. —Mr. Alfred Matthews is now a partner in the Gleason express business.

-Mr. Frank Porter is enjoying part of a two weeks vacation in these parts. —A majority of the residents of Grove street, are complaining of malaria.

-Mrs. A. M. Prentiss is spending a two weeks vacation at Lake Sunapee, N. H., stopping at the Colby House. - Mr. L. E. Leland's houses on Beacon and Washington streets, have been painted one color and look attractive.

—The old gas pipes along where the re-pairs were made on the Washington street hill some time ago are now being dug up. —Hagerty's block is being made attractive both outside and in by a thorough painting. Collins of Wellesley Hills is doing the work.

ELIOT.

-Mrs. Thomas Barry has returned from a visit to Providence, R. I.

-Mr. Benjamin Dickerman, our popular improvement projector, has been in New York this week on business. Mr. Dickerman is doing much to make Eliot attractive, and the several houses he has erected shows a confidence in the future development of a very pretty village.

THE LABOR CANDIDATE.

They chose John Hammer for three

First, because he was so honest and single-minded. They knew as well as they could know anything, that he would never play them false. They could strum upon his candor to their heart's content. They also had the wit to perceive that, if ever they disagreed with him, or he dis-agreed with them, this excellent quality of his would provide off-hand the material for a dispute which would end in his resignation or supersession.

Next, he was poor. That was almost as convenient as his extreme honesty. Unquestionably, if their man was not poor, he might by and by kick over the traces, and enjoy himself until the next dissolution without the least reference to the men who, to all public intents and purposes, had created him. John was, in fact, so poor, that if they had not provided him with an allowance of so much a week, with travelling expenses, second-class, and a dress suit, as extras, he would not have been able to pay his dinner bill for a single week, let alone support his wife and family. He was as thoroughly dependent upon them as a marine pier upon the piles which support if

In the third place, John Hammer was an out-and-out Red, with political views which quite accorded with their own. He had been educated at the National School of Wallsend until he was ten, when he entered the world of real life as a pit-bank boy. From that time for-ward, until he became foreman of a gang of colliers, he had continued to mature And now he could sneer at the queen and the royal family, bring down his right fist with a resounding whack into the hollow of his left hand when he mentioned the civil or the pension list, be-come frenzied in his contrast of the earnings of a pitman with the inherited earnings of a pitman with the inherited income of a duke, and signify in very audible and expressive language his conviction that a time was coming when—; all this he could do as well as the most conscientious demagogue that Wallsend had ever had the good luck to listen to. It was clear, therefore, that John Hammer was their man.

"What wilt say, my woman, when thy John tacks M. P. to his name?" quoth the candidate to his wife, a week before the polling-day. "An it'll coom to pass, my lass, tek my word for it!"

"I shanna know what to say, John It'll be so strange-loike; an' oime na sure it'll be good for ayther o' the pair of us."

"Thee bist a fule!" said John; and in his displeasure he swung the latch of his little cottage at four-and-six a week, and strode into the highroad.

Here he chanced to encounter Mr. Juggins, the master of the Amalgamated Association of Nuteracker-makers and Glass-blowers, and together they adjourned for the rest of the day to the Jolly Bacchus, a snug public-house with a vast deal of polished brass about its fittings, and a sanded floor.

Mr. Juggins controlled a hundred and eighty-seven votes in the coming election. He and John were on the most friendly terms. It was mainly due to him that the six wirepullers of the district had chosen their present candidate. friendly terms. It was mainly due to him that the six wirepullers of the district had chosen their present candidate. Mr. Juggins was immensely ambitions, He was small, and feverish of speech, with a tuft of grey beard, and a habit of winking his eyes for no apparent reason. He received three pounds a week from the nut-cracker makers and glass-blowers, for whom he kindly acted as corporate treasurer, as well as secretary, counsellor, and friend. But it did not content him. He had seraphic visions of State patronace in the hands of John Hammer, M. P., the pickings of which would in the time to come fall to Barzillai Juggins. Hence the inspired fervor of his utterances to the glass-blowing and nut-cracker-making electors, whose votes he held in the palm of his hand. "John Hammer's your man, my dear friends. He'll put his foot down on the infamous abuses which crush the poor workingman out of the position which is his right by the laws of heaven, and equity, and nature, and common sense. Down, therefore, with the pampered aristocrat and the pension list, and up with the candidate of the A. A. N. G."

Messrs. Scarth, Perkins, Robinson, Abbott, and Banks, the other five wirepullers of Wallsend, were much like Barzillai Juggins. Each had the fingering of a number of votes of the local colliers and mechanics. Each in public professed principles the most unselfish and philanthropic, which all pointed to John Hammer as their eventual representative; and each, in the privacy of his heart, cared only for himself.

These five worthy geutlemen were married. Juggins, on the other hand, was a bachelor. The women of the district—a hard-tongued class, were wont to say in jest that Barzillai would explode his wife out of doors two or three times a day, if he had such a tender helpmate; and perhaps he would.

On the twenty-first of May Mr. Juggins received a letter which made him wink a hundred and fifty times without a pause. It began, "My dear Mr. Juggins," and ended, "Believe me, your sincere friend, Wilhelmina Dashville.

It was nothing less han an invitation to lunch in a quiet and friendly way at Dashville Castle with the Countess of Dashville

The phraseology of the letter delighted Mr. Juggins beyond anything. This sentence, for example:—
"I have heard from my husband and others quite sufficient about your disinterested love for the working-classes to feel no scruple in addressing you as a fellow-laborer in that grand cause;"

etc., etc.

Moreover, it was so affable; and her ladyship actually condescended to be poetic.

This was the more remarkable, seeing that the countess was famous for her that the countess was famous for her gowns.

Mr. Juggins put his chin in his hand, and reflected. The upshot was that he resolved to lunch with the Countess of Dashville. Why should he not? After all, was not a countess a human being like himself? That she was the wife of a Conservative lord was an accident for which she could not be held accountable. And so Barzillai made a careful toilet in his Sabbath black, and departed in a cab. But he had the tact to dismiss the cabman amile from the castle. Thither he walked along, on the ends of his toes, with his trousers turned up, looking askance at every one he met in the lanes. Once inside the park gates, he dusted himself nicely from head to toe with his dark-blue silk pocket-handkerchief, took a sprig of red geranium from a paper bag, set it in his buttonhole, and approached the grandiose portico of the castle.

That night there was a meeting of the labor candidate's committee, but Mr. Juggins, for some unexplained reason, did not attend it.

Mrs. Scarth, whose husband ws the secretary of the Corporate Society of Wallsend Nailmakers, a powerful body, representing one hundred and twenty-four votes, was frightened almost out of her seven senses the next day by the sudden apparition of a stranger, leading by the hand her much-beloved, first-born son, Renben, howling furiously.

"Are you Mrs. Scarth? This is the house, my dear little lad, is it not? Don't cry so," said the stranger, all in a breath.

"Please to step inside, sir," said the nailmakers' secretary's wife, when she had seanned her offspring with a mother's regarding eye, and found him sound of limb.

regarding eye, and found him sound of limb.

"It was in this way, Mrs. Scarth. I was walking into Wallsend to see my friend Mr. Parchment, the attorney, when I heard a horrible wail from among the pit-banks. Without an instant's hesitation I left the road and clambered over the rubbish heaps in the direction of the cry. Now be composed, there's a dear woman, though I feel it will give you a shock. What did I see but a tall, dark man, with a forbidding countenance, stooping into an abandoned pit-shaft, and holding something over the abyss. The something proved to be this little boy, and it was his pair of little feet that I saw. Never mind how I rescued him. The man must have been deranged; at any rate, he has made himself scarce.

been deranged; at any rate, he has made himself scarce.

Mrs. Scarth snatched her darling to her heart, and sobbed audibly. "He was going to his school, the precious! like the other lads. God bless you, sir."

The stranger stayed with the poor woman longer than seemed necessary. At parting she took his proffered hand in the most cordial manner.

"I shall never forget you, sir—never," she said; "and I will certainly do the best I can with him."

"A thousand thanks. I am more than proud that I have been able to do you a service."

That afternoon Mrs. Scarth and her husband had a strenuous palaver. At first Mr. Scarth was obdurate as marble. But his wife used certain discreet conjugal menaces, which at length had the desired effect, and in the end the nailmakers' representative gave way.

At the committee meeting of the labor candidate that night neither Mr. Scarth nor Mr. Juggins appeared.

At the morning service the deacon's sharp eyes discerned a pleasant-faced stranger, and after service the stranger accosted Mr. Banks.

"Come into the pastor's room," said the deacon, "he'll have changed his clothes and gone by now."

"Thank you, Mr. Banks," said the stranger, "but I think our conversation will be better in the open air, and as the day is mild for the time of the year, if you have no objection—"

"Not a mite," said Mr. Banks.

When they had walked up and down the pavement in front of the ugly little chapel for about half an hour, the angry looks and gesticulations with which the deacon had at first seemed to receive the stranger's communication wholly disappeared. It was dinner-time ere they parted, and at parting Mr. Banks smiled a beaming smile upon the stranger.

"It'll be an acceptable wurruk, sir, and do a power of good. One can't hev a fold too large for the stray lambs that hev to be gathered into it."

"Good-bye," said the stranger. "You shall hear from me."

"I wish you good-day, sir," said Mr. Banks; and as he walked to his home he smilted the smell of roast meat which pervaded the thoroughfare, and held his head high, and looked everyone and everything full in the face, with an expression in which conscious uprightness and contentment were agreeably mingled. mingled.

The committee meeting of the labor candidate on Monday evening was a melancholy farce. Only Mr. Perkins and Mr. Abbott attended it. Mr. Perkins represented the locksmiths, and Mr. Abbott the tinplate-workers.

"What I wornt to know is this," said Mr. Perkins to Mr. Abbott: "Who's to pay for the wehicles to bring the men to the pole?" "I hev heerd that they're all took by

"And why ar'n' the others here, eh? Robinson, I know, has bin called to his sick mother; but he ain't all."

"Banks, I heerd, have had a kick-up at his chapel—something smart's on, I've heerd."

Mr. Abbott, who was a common mechanic, whereas Mr. Perkins employed

The next morning, which was Tuesday, the twenty-sixth of May, Mr. Perkins met Mr. Juggins in the street and promptly stopped him.
"Are we all of the same mind that we was a while ago?" he asked; and then he tightened his mouth, and tried to look intelligent.

was a while ago?" he asked; and then he tightened his mouth, and tried to look intelligent.

"Hush!" said Mr. Juggins, with a finger set vertically across his lips for one moment. "Come into the Temperance House, and have a cup of coffee."

"What's the meaning of it all?" continued Mr. Perkins, much excited.

"Things be changed, Perkins," said Mr. Juggins, when they were seated in the far corner of the big room, and concealed from the outer world by the vapor that eddied from two elephantine mugs. "What do you think of Hammer taking to drink in this way?

"Drink!" exclaimed Mr. Perkins, and his finger involuntarily grasped the bit of blue ribbon that patched his coat where he had frayed it, against the desk.

"It was only the other night 1 saw him in the Jolly Bacchus in a state—well, I won't particularize. We all know what that means. The man ain't strong enough in the head. If he thinks fit to elevate himself on account of two birds in the bush which he thinks are both his, what'll it be when he becomes our master, so to speak, and free to play the gentleman at our expense?"

"I'm main sorry," said Mr. Perkins meditatively; "but, of course, there's nowt more to be done. What shall you do?"

him or don't. Better an aristocrat than a drunkard."
"Much better," sighed Mr. Perkins.
"Then we needn't trouble about hiring cars and all that?"
"Of course not. Don't you see, we ought to have done it weeks ago, really. It's providential, and nothing else, that we held our hands."
"Well!" said Mr. Perkins.
"Well!" said Mr. Juggins; and thus they parted.

To his extreme irritation, Mr. Abbott, the tinplate representative, found himself all alone in the committee-room of the labor candidate on the Tuesday evening. Having clumped up and down the chamber for half an hour, with his hands in his pookets, he departed, and called upon Mr. Juggins, ir, said he, as soon as he saw Barzillai, "I'll be dommed if I hev anything more to do wi' Jack Hammer. He've cost me, I reckon, fourteen hours this past fortnight, at a shilling and a ha'penny the hour, and I be tired of it. It's different for you, mebbe, being as you be treasurer as well as Union deputy."
"Sit down, Ezra," said Mr. Juggins kindly, and then, having brought forth a black bottle of Old Tom, he soothed Mr. Abbott's wounded feelings, and informed him that it was all over with Hammer's chances. "Every one knows it except Hammer himself."

"John, dear, won't you come to your bed?" entreated his anxious spouse while he was writing this.
"Hould thy tongue, woman! Thou'rt cat and kittens all in one for talking," was his reply. It was surprising how different his written style bad already become from his style colloquial.

But the poor creature, his wife, was not deterred by this rebuff from trying her best to prepare her husband for the physical fatigues of the morrow.

"There'll be a bit bread, wi'n sausage in it, in' thy right tall-pocket, an' a flat bottle in the other. Tak' care how you sit; and do, John, if they want to cheer (chair) thee, see as it's a strong un, for thee beest no light weight."

"Will stop thy gabbing or not?" shouted the labor candidate tempestaously; and then there was silence.

The Wallsend election will long be re-shouted the labor candidate tempestaously; and then there was silence.

The Wallsend election will long be remembered for its sensational surprise.
It was known that the Primrose dames and their knights and esquires had been extraordinarily active at the last moment in trying to undermine the Radical interest in the borough, but few indeed supposed that they had succeeded.
Most people who saw the Countess of Dashville driving about the grimy streets thought it was lost labor on her part.
John Hammer, who went to and fro in a mild one-horse shay, and attended by a single faithful henchman, would, it was generally believed, be returned by a large majority. John had been advised a fortnight previously to spend the day in this pleasaut thought somewhat monotonous public display of himself, and he faithfully acted upon the suggestion, at a cost of seventeen shillings and sixpence out of his own pocket. At times he marvelled that he saw little or nothing of the various committee-men who had been so enthusiastic about his candidature. But he consoled himself with the idea that they were fighting manfully on his behalf.

with the idea that they were fighting manfully on his behalf.

The result of the poll was announced at eleven o'clock the same evening, and the Hon. Ponsonby Vane Fitzroy was declared duly elected by a majority of eleven hundred and nine.

Poor John Hammer received only forty-five votes.

Messrs. Juggins, Scarth, Robinson, Banks, Perkins, and Abbott had prevailed only too well with the free and independent electors, of whom they were the advisers. Hardly a dozen of them had acted upon their own instincts.

John Hammer returned to his cottage at four-and-six a week worn out, depressed, and so stupefied by the disappointment and the coldness of those he had believed his friends that he could not think he was in his right senses.

Mrs. Hammer, however, good soul, received him much as the father in the parable welcomed his prodigal son.

"Never thee mind, my man," she said cheerfully, as she bustled about a prime pork chop she was cooking for him; "it be all for the best, I be sure. Thee an' me would ha' bin miserable in Lunnon; we ain't fit for 't. Thee'll soon get the old wurruk agin, and then we'll be happy, an' be able to buy ninepenny butter agin. John, my man, I canna help sayin' it, but I be right glad thee's lost, an' I canna help it,"

"Because thee bist a fule!" blurted John, with a bent head, as he turned towards the pork chop, which had been thrust smoking under his nose.

THE GRADE CROSSINGS.

SOME OBJECTIONS TO THE ELEVATED ROAD PLAN.

[Boston Home Journal.] The feeling in favor of the abolishment of grade crossings in the Newtons has become so intense that the in-habitants of those beautiful villages seem ready to welcome almost any plan that promises the desired relief. this reason, no doubt, the proposition of this reason, no doubt, the proposition of the Boston & Albany Railroad Company to elevate their tracks so that all high-ways shall pass under them was re-ceived with quite general favor. There are certain things which ought to be very carefully considered, however, be fore this great change is inaugurated. fore this great change is inaugurated. The question of how the desirability of Newton, Newtonville and West Newton, as places of residence, would be affected by the proposed plan, and the consequent effect of the change upon real estate, is a most important one. Railestate, is a most important one. Rail-roads are unsightly at the best, and change is made is almost certain to be permanent, and not the easiest plan nor the cheapest should be adopted, but that which, however much or little experse it may involve, will prove, for all time, the most practical and satisfactory.

He who cannot resist temptation is not a man. He is wanting in the highest attributes of humanity. The honor and the nobleness of the old knight-errantry consisted in defending the innocence of meu, and protecting the chastity of women against the assaults of others. But true and noble knighthood protects the property and the character, the innocence and the chastity of others against one's self.

The Way It Blew on the Lake

The Way It Blew on the Lake.

A party of yachtsmen were becalmed out on Lake Ontario Sunday afternoon, and while waiting for a breeze the time was occupied in spinning yarns. There were two or three old salts on board, and they did all the spinning, while the younger and less experienced tars sat and smoked and listened. Finally one of the old salts took his pipe from between his teeth long enough to draw breath, and said:

breath, and said:
"You fellows give me a pain talking about big storms. Why, I was out in a storm in the summer of 489 that was so much bigger than any that you have ever seen that they are like cat's paws compared to it."

Then he stopped and began industri-ously to draw upon his pipe again.

"Tell us about it." said the young fel-lows in charge.

"It was in the month of July in the o'lt was in the month of July in the year 1869, and I was out on the lake in a yacht of mine," he said, after pausing long enong to fill his pipe afresh and light it, "and the wind began to get pretty fresh. I paid but little attention to it, but it kept blowing fresher and fresher, and one of my crew asked if we had not better shorten sail. I thought that there was no danger and said that there was time enough. All of a sudden the wind began to blow harder than I eyer saw it in this latitude, and we all began to get badly scared.

"I gave orders to take in sail, but before the men could lay hands on a rope a big puff came and away went the sails into ribbons. There we were out in the middle of the lake with no sails, and the situation began to look desperate. How middle of the lake with no sails, and the situation began to look desperate. How we were going to get in I did not know, but the very storm itself furnished us a way and we rode safely to shore."

Here he stopped and began to smoke. "How did you get in?" asked the youngest sailor of the lot. "Why," said the old salt, "the wind blew so hard that it blew the ropes out flat and they served for sails."—Rochester Democrat.

A Memorable Christmas Dinner.

The misery endured during those four months at Donner, lake in our little dark cabins under the snow would fill pages and make the coldest heart ache. Christmas was near, but to the starving its memory gave no comfort. It came and passed without observance, but my mother had determined weeks before that her children should have a treat on this one day. She had laid away a few dried apples, some beans, a bit of tripe, and a small piece of bacon.

When this hoarded -store was brought out the delight of the little ones knew no bounds. The cooking was watched out the denght of the little ones knew no bounds. The cooking was watched carefully, and when we sat down to our Christmas dinner mother said, "Children, eat slowly, for this one day you can have all you wish." So bitter was the misery relieved by that one bright day, that I have never since sat down to a Christmas dinner without my thoughts.

a Christmas dinner without my mongane going back to Donner lake.

The storms often would last ten days at a time, and we would have to cut chips from the logs inside which formed our cabin in order to start a fire. We could scarcely walk, and the men had hardly strength to procure wood. We hardly strength to procure wood. We would drag ourselves through the snow from one cabin to another, and some mornings snow would have to be shoveled out of the fireplace before a fire could be made. Poor little children were crying with hunger and mothers were control of made. For first enhance were crying with hunger, and mothers were crying because they had so little to give their children. We seldom thought of bread, we had been without it so long. Four months of such suffering would fill the brayest hearts with despair.—Cor. Century.

A Victim of Science.

The frog has been called "the victim of science" because he is always being dissected for the purpose of seeing how he can get along without his most essential organs, how his blood circulates and how his nervous system acts. He is selected for such ends not, as is commonly imagined, because his structure is at all humanlike, but for the reason that he will endure being chopped up to such a remarkable extent and still retain life.

You can remove his brain and he will

You can remove his brain and he will get along fairly well without it, swallowing whatever is put into his mouth, and otherwise behaving as usual, though in an automatic fashion. In fact the animal will live indefinitely under such conditions, as experiment has shown. If you cut out his lungs he will not die for a long time, because he can breathe very well through his skin. Human beings breathe through the skin all over the body in a small degree, the blood in the superficial vessel taking up, a certain amount of oxygen, but the function is exercised more satisfactorily by the frog. You can remove his brain and he will exercised more satisfactorily by the frog.

Besides, his nervous system affords an interesting study under ingenious torture by the anatomist, and the corpuscles in his blood being remarkably large, that fluid serves admirably for the instruction of the seeker after medical knowledge.— Interview in Washington Star.

The Wheel Is Thousauds of Years Old.

The earliest mention of wheels in the Bible is in Exodus xiv, 25, when the chariot wheels of the Egyptians were taken off by the Lord; but chariots are mentioned in Genesis xii, 43. But there were older nations than the Egyptians. The Chaldeans used chariots; the Greeks—Homer's poems date from about 900 B. C.—had chariots at the siege of Troy, 1,500 B. C. Probably in reality the wheel is about as early a piece of machinery as any now existing. Of course it has been developed, but the bicycle wheel of today is a lineal descendant of the section of a log of wood used by the agricultural peoples thousands of years ago.—New York Sun. The Wheel Is Thousands of Years Old.

Mr. Clews' Costly Bathroom.

Henry Clews, of New York, devotes a great deal of time and money to beautifying his house. He is particularly well pleased with any one who expresses a desire to go through it, and one of the first rooms he will take a visitor into is his bathroom. He is said to have expended $40,000 on this room. The walls, floor, bath, in fact, every part of the room, is of onyx.—Upholsterer.

HOW THEY VOTE IN JAPAN Polls That Present a Striking Contrast to Ours in This Country.

The polls had opened at 8 o'clock, and one by one the farmers had come straggling in from the surrounding country.

The greater number gathered in the small meeting half just outside the polling room, whence arose a quiet buzzing. It was a reminder of the gathering in the churchyard on Sunday, in old times, be-tween the morning and the afternoon

There was little laughter, less loud argument and no angry disputing. Every now and then, like bees leaving a ery now and then, like bees leaving a hive, a figure was seen to separate from the rest and move off toward the polling room, and anon another returned. One saw among them here and there the modern Japanese, with his imitation of foreign garments, in appearance seldom elegant, often awkward, and generally out of harmony with the surroundings. But chiefly there came the old fashioned rustic, in his best silk tobes, with square shaven crown and short queue caught up and tied—perhaps wearing the hakama, or divided skirt, of the old samurai. A gentleman in every act, he bows as he enters to the official at the door, carefully writes his ballot and door, carefully writes his ballot and affixes his seal, then with great deliberation folds it and places it in the oblong official envelope. For some of the voters it is necessary to seek the assistance of a special clerk in writing their ballots. It is not that they cannot write, for every special terr in writing their ballots. It is not that they cannot write; for every-body knows the plebeian kana or syllabic writing. They prefer to see their ballots inscribed with the more elegant Chinese characters; and then, too, the kana is sometimes ambiguous (for some words have a dozen different meanings), and there is a natural perturbation and and there is a natural perturbation and a desire to have their meaning clearly a desire to have their meaning clearly and correctly conveyed. When the writing is finished the long sleeved voter walks over to the tachiainin, or inspectors. Here further effusions of politeness take place, while the voter gives his name, number and address, and is checked off on the register. Then, with another gesture of courtesy, he turns to the ballot box, and with a bow, perhaps in duplicate, to the kind old mayor, who sits behind the box, he carefully deposits his ballot and quietly retires by another door,—J. H. Wigmore in Scribner's.

A wedding ceremony occurred some years ago of a then United States senayears ago of a their Circles States sensitive, who, a widower twice over, had for the third time succumbed to Cupid's wiles. At his first and second marriage the ceremony had been performed by an Episcopal clergyman, and hence the senator was quite familiar with the Episcopal marriage form.

But the beautiful woman who had But the beautiful woman who had captured his affections the third time was a devont Presbyterian, and naturally wished the connubial knot to be tied by a minister of her own church, and according to its simple service. To this the statesman lover made no objection. The character of the service was of small account to him so long as it served to unite him to the object of his adoration, and the thought that he might blunder in the course of it never disturbed for a moment the serenity of his mind.

But, standing beside his bride to be But, standing beside his bride to be, stage fright, as it might be called, seized him. In the excitement he began to marry himself, as it were, by the Episcopal service, repeating glibly: "1, take thee. —, to be my wedded wife," and he would probably have gone on to the end if the astonished Presbyterian minister, who immediately appreciated the situation, had not interposed, and, interrupting the bridegroom, performed the ceremony with the brevity of the Presbyterian form.

Fallacy of Fish and Brain.

One popular fallacy in connection with fish may be noticed, namely, the oft repeated assertion that the eating of that particular food increases brain power. No one who has studied the subject can possibly believe the assertion. A man picture at hyer profite of fish every possibly believe the assertion. A man night eat a huge portion of fish every day of his life, and on the day of his death, if the quantity of phosphorus (the brain invigorator) consumed were to be-come visible, it would not amount to more than might probably suffice to tip

Communities have existed that lived a couple of luciter matches.

Communities have existed that lived almost solely on fish, but these ichthyophagists were certainly not famous for intellectual attainments. Nor are our fisher villages, in many of which much fish is presumably consumed, the seats of any great amount of brain power. None of our fisherfolks are remarkable for genius, or even what is called common sense, their views of life and its responsibilities being shrouded in a haze of superstition, which they lack sufficient strength of mind to see through.

No fishing community, so far as is known to the writer, has given to the world a great man. Men of mark—poets, preachers, lawyers, philosophers, warriors and physicians—have emanated, in Scotland at any rate, from all classes except the fishing class.—Temple Ber Wasting His Breath.

Out at the ball grounds a small boy who occupied a pew in the bleachers said a funny thing. One of the Albany players was at the bat, and after a couple of balls and a strike had been called on him he hit a long foul to right field. He at once started for first base, and with head down plunged along in the same way that a steer is supposed to run through the corn. The small boy over in the bleachers watched him for a minute and then yelled out at the top of a very shrill and squeaky voice: "Say, cully, come back. You're working overtime."—Bochester Democrat.

There are two ways in which the value of a lifetime may be measured, by years and by events. A man may live to be eighty years old and yet find at the end that his life was hardly worth living. A Mozart may die at thirty-five and measure his life by the birth of great compositions, each an event in the history of the world. Years do not count. A man lives by events.—Charles Barnard.

pleased with Massachusetts and the way they were met socially, and greatly invigorated by our cooler atmosphere.

-After the exciting game last Wednesday many friends of Richard Grines Bennett, the official scorer of the Newtons, placed him upon their shoulders and carried him around the bases and then off the field. To still move show their appreciation for his excellent scoring during the past season they invited him to supper with them and then all went arm in arm to the theatre.

The Boston Traveller is making war against "hoodlums." It is well that they should be attended to, even in Newton Centre. One of them, who was observed and his track followed not long since, amused himself by stoning a couple of windows in an exposed but somewhat out of the way building. The proprietor is earnestly waiting for the said hoodlum to send a glazier to set 19 panes of glass, and when the job is finished to pay honorably the bill.

—Messrs. George F. Richardson, D. H. McWain, Welles Folly and Richard Huggard spent Tuesday afternoon fishing off Nantasket shore. Although they were not presumably fishing for whales still the story goes that one of the party hooked a whale, losing on half of his eard a to the surface to prove the truth of this yarn, but the force necessary to break and carry off that line and hook could only be exerted by a whale of the largest species. But whatever the fish tale may be the fact remains that 24 small sea perch gave their lives into the keeping of the whale hunters and lost.

-Last Thursday evening, July 30, Miss Maude C. Dyer entertained a few friends at her home, Crescent avenue. The house was profusely d=orated with flowers, pinks, roses, and smoke plant being gracefully arranged on the mantels and chandellers. Miss Maude, together with her mother and sister received in the parlor. After tea was served, the young people participated in dancing and other amusements. "Compliments" were freely interchanged during the evening, and a few jokes were indulged in. The following were present: Misses Butler, Holstead, Lena Twombly, Grace Busiel, Hattle Paul, Clara Bond, Fannie Leonard, Edith Read, Margaret Rand, Julia Fowle, Florence Speare, May Ward, Alice Ward, Messrs. Fred Wildes, Fred Bond, Charles Fitz, Charles Howard, Bert Degen, Will Rising, Owen Leonard, Luther Paul.

Charles Howard, Bert Degen, Will Rising, Owen Leonard, Luther Paul.

—"The clock strikes one," says Dryoung in his celebrated 'Night Thoughts," Not the night thoughts of any one of that name residing in Newton Centre, for everybody knows, by this time, that our town clock never does strike, by night or day. Yet we are not totally destitute, and can "take note of time by its departure," in the lone tap at quarter before 12 m., and quarter before 2 m., and quarter before 6 p. m., also by the arrival and departure of the railroad trains, ditto of the various milk earts and of George Ellis' ice team, by which we can set our time-pieces somewhere near the sun. Minutes are of no account round here. "The evening and the morning make a day." (Gen. 1, 5 old version), and that is near enough to "the serene steps of one calm day chasing another," round and round the classic shores of Crystal Lake and the monastic shades of Institution Hill.

—Mr. William C. Strong died at Denyer, and the monastic shades of Institution Hill.

—Mr. William C. Strong died at Denver, Col., on the 15th July. He was formerly a resident of Newton Centre and will be well remembered by many as occupying the Sylvester mansion, on the corner of Warren street and Glen avenue. He was born in Boston, served his time with Croome & Hixon, and was afterward a member of the firm of George Croome & Co. Twelve years ago he was obliged to leave Massachusetts on account of chronic asthma. He located in Denver, but much of his time was trayelling over the state of Colorado. Several months since he was confined to his bed in great suffering, from severe injuries to the sciatic nerve, from the kick of a horse. This may have been the immediate cause of his death. It is remarkable that his youngest child was killed by a horse in a similar manner. He leaves a widow, one son and a daughter.

Woodland Park, West Medway, Wednesday, for a day's outing. The barty numbered 800 people. In the moraing a game of base ball was played between picked nines and also between boys of Upper Falls and of Needham. In the latter game the score stood: Needham, 12; Upper Falls, 10. Fales' orchestra furnished music for dancing. At noon a collation was enjoyed and the afternoon sports resulted as follows: Three-leged race won by Glassop and Prendergast of Newton Lower Falls; sack race, arst prize, John Donelan of Lower Falls; second prize, C. P. O'Hara of West Medway; one hundred-yard dash for men, won by Smith of Needham, Lyons of West Medway and O'Hara of West Medway, first; William Doyle of Needham, second. The first prize for jumping was won by C.P.O'Hara and James McDonouch. For throwing the heavy weight, F. Crowley of Needham was the winner. At 5 o'clock an assembly was held in the bavilion, and Father Danely announced the following prizes to several members of the Sabbata school for different rewards of merit in scholarship; Gold crosses to Norah Shaughnessy, George Furcell, Dennis K-etc, Margaret Welch, Ella McDonadl, Edward Daila and Julia Shillyan, and a gold crudits to Mattle Harding. Mary Collins, George Warren, Elizabeth riarding, Ann Daley, Joseph Connors, Ellen Bolger, Elizabeth Gallagher, Edward Ryan, Joseph Kane, Francis Goodwin, Thomas Abraham, William Leary, May Purcell and others. The little people were loudly applauded as these awards were announced and delivered. The affair was for the benefit of the new church just built in Needham, and netted about $600.

—A member of Charles Ward Post & tells the following story of interest concerning the Detroit enampment of the G. A. R.: "Charles Ward Post established its headquarters at the Perkins house, also headquarters of the New York division of the G. A. R. On the morning of our departure, a delegation of bootblacks came to the botel and presented a flag to the commander of post 22 of Buffalo, who had been very kind and considerate to the your shoes' brigade. The spokes, man, a bright little fellow, aged 8 years, in presenting the flag said to the astonished veteran: "It didn't cost much, but it is the flag and what it represents that appeals to every loyal American. We want you to see that we cherish that thought, but be sides that we desire to express to you in some way our appreciation of your kindness." The gift was accepted in the spirit which prompted its presentation. The post commander who received it will cherish it always and will look back to that scene and day with ever increasing sensations of his pleasure mingled with regard for his little bootblack friends. Let us hope that a bright future awaits the urehins who honor their country's flag and country's defenders.

—The male quartet which offered their services for the first time last Sunday morning at the Baptist church, make a pleasing change in the service of song, which will be continued during the summer. Messrs. Forbes, Coffin, Babcock and Morgan comprise the quartet. The absence of a majority of the regular choir for the summer makes the change necessary. The attendance at the Sunday morning service was large and an instructive and interesting sermon was delivered by the pastor, Rev. G. W. Holman, who took for his text these words: And the fool hath said in his heart, there is no God.

Cottage Hospital.

Cottage Hospital.

Mr Geo. S. Bullens, treasurer of the Newton Cottage Hospital, has received a check for $5,000 from Mrs. E. T Elderidge, the same to be used as a trust fund, for the support of the Hospital Ambulence, which Mrs. Eldridge some time ago presented to the Hospital.

This generous gift is much appreciated by the Hospital trustees, as the ambulance is a necessary part of the Hospital, giving as it does a very convenient and comfortable means of carrying sick people there. This gift it is hoped will inspire others to contribute for the expenses of the Hostal, as $4,000 is still needed to pay the bills which have accumulated, and which ought to be paid at once. Any small contributor the purpose will be welcome.

THE EL BORADO ASHORE.

WORK OF CAPT. BOYD OF THIS CITY IN

The New York Herald of August 8 contained the following dispatch con-cerning the wrecking of the iron freight steamer El Dorado and the efforts of Capt. Boyd of this city to secure relief:

Capt. Boyd of this city to secure relief:

"The revenue steamer McLane, Captain E. C. Clayter commanding, arrived here this morning with Chief Officer Boyd of the Morgan line steamer El Dorado, ashore on Bimini, on the Bahama Banks, twelve miles southwest of Great Issaes light.

The El Dorado having made the Mantanila Reef, for which she steered after leaving Hatteras, obtained a good observation and headed down through the Florida Straits. When off Bimini, in six fathoms of water, the vessel's bilge struck a sunken rock, and as she was going at full speed at the time, with all sails set, went completely over the rock and started to settle forward. Her two-compartments forward were found to be flooded, having eighteen feet of water in them. She was at once headed for the bank, where she was beached, and now lies in a critical condition. Excepting El Sol she is the newest ship of the line. She will go to pieces if assistance is not soon rendered.

Captain Byrne, of the steamer, after much difficulty succeeded in chartering.

Captain Byrne, of the steamer, after much difficulty succeeded in chartering a British schooner to take his first mate to the nearest American port, where he could obtain assistance and telegraph the stranding of the ship to the company.

the stranding of the ship to the company.

AN EXTOBRIONATE CAPTAIN.

The schooner Captain demanded $5,000 for his work, but afterward agreed to take $2,000, and in the small sailing craft, subjected to the heat of the sun and scarcity of food, &c., Mr. Boyd set out on Wednesday, August 5, for this place. On account of calms and head winds progress was slow, and on Friday, late at night, Mr. Boyd was picked up by the McLane off Alligator Lighthouse, on the reefs.

Stating his mission, he was taken on board and the McLane turned round and steamed for Key West with the greatest possible despatch.

Wreckers are now at work getting ready to embark and when ready the McLane will carry gear and divers to the fill fated El Dorado. Captain Williams and Johnson of this place, will examine her bottom on arrival and all efforts will be made to stop the leaks, which are supposed to be large, and to float her and bring her to Key West for repairs.

Officer Boyd has done all in his power to obtain relief for his shipwrecked crew.''

The Case of Judge Brewer.

To the Editor of the GRAPHIC: I was very much surprised at the statements made in Mr.Partridge's letter last week, concerning Judge Brewer of the United States Supreme Court. Judge Brewer was a classmate of Dr. Calkins and Mr. Whitney of the Public Library of Boston, and recently spent some time in Newton with Dr. Calkins. I had thought it would be wise for Newton people know some facts concerning him. has always been a strong temperance man by precept and example, an earnest, devout Christian man, always in his place in the Sabbath school and prayer devoit Christian man, always in his place in the Sabbath school and prayer meeting. On the first Sabbath in Washington after his appointment he reported himself to the Sabbath school of the church he was to attend and asked for a class to teach. When the wacancy to which he was appointed to fill occurred in the Supreme Court of the United States, it was almost the unanimous feeling of the bar of the Northwest, that of all men for that place, Judge Brewer by his great learning as a jurist, his ability and integrity as a judge, together with his high moral character, was the best qualified. The judges of the Supreme Court in Washington were unanimous in their approval of his nomination, and no judge in our time has been more cordially received by that court than he. His previous decision in his own district upon one portion of the statutes on the liquor question as the law there stood could not have been different, and this is acknowledged by eminent jurists of all parts and of all opinions upon the temperance questions. A conscientious man, versed in the law, as it then stood, could have rendered no other opinion.

It seems a pity that the great cause of temperance which so many have at heart should be so injured by having such an article written concerning such a man, when we have so few of them in public life.

The School Census.

The School board through Mr. George E. Bridges has made its annual canvas of the number of persons in the city between the ages of 5 and 15 years. The figures by wards are appended: Ward 1, 672; Ward 2, 877; Ward 3, 742; Ward 4, 607; Ward 2, 878; Ward 3, 681; Ward 7, 803; total, 436. The total number last year was 4241, and the increase this year is 195. There was an increase in each ward with the exception of Ward 4, where there was a falling off of 14 from last year's figures.

TWO WEEKS IN A MILITARY CAMP.

OR LIFE IN THE NATURAL HISTORY CAMP AT WORCESTER.

[By a 13-Year-Old Newton Boy.]

п. That morning after I had arrived in camp, I learned there was to be an expedition to Wachusett Mt., twenty-two miles away. I thought that if I went I would have a good chance to get acwould have a good chance to get ac-quainted with the boys, so I went to the Colonel and found out all about it. It cost five dollars to ride on horse-back, and one dollar to ride in carriages, and fifty cents to walk. I wanted to know why it would cost me fifty cents to use my own feet, but I was told that it was to pay for the horse and team that were to pay for the horse and team that were to carry our knapsacks, as we were too young to carry them on our backs. I found that the party that walked were going to stay until Friday and the party that rode were coming back on Thursday, which was the next day. I thought about it awhile and asked the other boys of the start which party, they were going of my tent which party they were going to join. I found that Carter and Brown were going to walk and Whiting was not going at all, so I decided to walk. I then went to head-quarters to enlist in the party that were to walk. It was about nine o'clock and they were to start at half past nine, so I hurried back to my tent to make up my knapsack. All I carried was a rubber coat, an overcoat, a towel, an extra pair of boots and stockings, one extra blouse, and two double ts. As soon as they were done ent to the tent of Mr. Tobin, from up, I went to the tent of Mr. Tobin, from which we were to start. As soon as the team was packed, about 9.45, we started on our long tramp of twenty-two miles. It began to grow hot towards noon, but not one of us felt discouraged or tired. Our orders were to keep near the wagon and not let it get out of our sight, for fear of getting astray. I think there were twenty-eight of us besides Mr. Tobin and Mr. Gray, who had us in charge.

and consistency. The pretty girl from Jamaica Plain makes bouquets with slender fingers as skilful, in that as in putting on paper the dainty stories that appear from time to time in Harper's Bazar and justify her claim to a name that has been honored in American literature for many years, since, though not itself creative, it has given to the world the creations of our most famous writers. The swift fingers move to such effect that by 2 o'clock about 2000 bouquets have been made, a number of loose fivers are put into baskets for distribution among the children in the summer schools and day nurseries. The day is so far advanced and so many places are yet to be visited that a carriage is ordered and five baskets of flowers are placed therein and sent off in care of two of the ladies. The first call is at the Home for Aged Women on Revere street. The old ladies are delighted to get the flowers, and express their pleasure in warm terms. It is no small task to traverse the long corridors on four floors but there is a good deal to interest one in the pleasant tidy rooms with their white haired occupants who receive their visitors with such cordiality. The home is very pleasantly situated, overlooking the river and seems far away from the city although in the heart of it.

At the Eye and Ear Infirmary on Charles street, the sight is heartbreaking. Every head is bandaged to some extent and we seem to have gone into a world of universal suffering. Yet even there they smile and are grateful for the flowers. The eyeless inmates cheerfully inhale the fragrance and so console themselves for the loss of the beauty of color. A basket is left at the Home for Colored Women on Myttle street, and have traverse this unknowu part of the city it seems like a foreign place. The last place to be visited is the box factory on Green street. Here we are welcomed with effusion. There are a great many girls here and a number of young men and they crowd around us with an eagerness that makes our task doubly pleasant. We go to every floor,

H. Southern, with "The Dancing Girl;" Fanny Davenportas "Cleopatra;" William H. Craue in "The Senator", and possibly a new production in the spring; Jefferson and Florence, Clara Morris, John J. McNally's new pantomimic and farce-comedy "Boys and Girls," Charles Frohman's grand production of "Thermador," Pitou's stock company, and other features.

"Why, James, you can't go to church in a neglige shirt, and you must go to church you know. Aunt Maria woufd think it awful if you didn't."

"But if I forgot to bring the white shirt," he suggested, "she——"

"But you mustn't forget it," she interrupted. "You must go, really. You promised you'd do what I wanted you to on this trip."

He sat down in a corner of the room with his grip in front of him and thought it all over for a minute, says the Chicago Tribune. Then he said:

"All right, Jennie. If it'll please you I'll take one."

He took a shirt out of the drawer and jammed it into a grip, and to show her appreciation of the act she put her arms around his neck and kissed him.

And the following Sunday morning, while he was getting his last doze, she took the shirt out of the valies and laid it on a chair. Then she went back to the valies and a moment later her voice rang out clear and sharp:
"Iames where are your collars and

NEWTON TARIFF REFORM CLUB. The Tariff is a Tax.

Every person interested in the subject of the criff, is cordially invited to take part in the causaions carried on in this column. Address cretary of the Tariff Reform Club, Newton intr., Mass.

THE Mckinley Bill.

"BY ITS FRUITS."

[The Boston Herald.] There is much labor in argument expended to show that the McKinley tariff has not injured business and interfered with the comfort of the people. We have before us as we write a statement exultantly made that "the country has not as yet witnessed the universal trade stagnation which the Democratic and mugwump papers prophesied." We have no recollection of "universal trade stagnation" having been prophesied, nor do we believe such a prophecy was ever made. What was said of the McKinley tariff was that it was intended to make prices higher to the people. That it prices higher to the people. That is would do this was not seriously denied by those who favored the policy which the McKinley tariff embodied. It was openly avowed by Gen. Harrison as a candidate for the presidency when he in effect objected to the people having cheap goods, using the famous illustration that "a cheap coat implied a cheap man inside the coat." It was avowed by Mr. McKinley, the author of the tariff. It was the burden of many of the speeches of authorized representatives in its favor. They argued that, while prices would rise, the augmented amount of business and the increase of wages of labor would more than compensate for this addition to the expense of living.

The universal wave of indignation which swept through the country against this attempt to increase the price of living by adding to taxation has had the effect completely to change the tone of the advocates of the McKinley tariff. They are now trying to prove that it will not do what they framed it to accomplish. It does not raise prices, they say; it does not even prevent importation. We are obtaining substantially as many foreign goods, and we are getting them at the old rates to the American consumer. In other words, the McKinley tariff, in its protective features, is practically in-operative. That being so, it may well be asked where was the utility in passing it. But, of course, it is not so. The McKinley tariff is as obnoxious in its protective features as the worst anticipations led the public to believe it would be. It is by passing them over and dwelling upon its single nonprotective or free trade feature of importance, that relating to sugar, that the attempt is chiefly made nowadays to justify the law.

But even in this light it will be observed the most that it is claimed by the writer we are quoting is that there is not universal trade stagnation." That the McKinley tariff has been a success in any way in the ten months of its operation very few have the hardihood to assert. The people fully understand that it is not only wrong in principle, but a failure already in its effects. They understand t that business would have been better today if it had been left alone by legislators at Washington.

The fact is that so important an increase in taxation as was made could not fail to injure business. A great deal has been said about the prices of certain articles being kept down. This is, in itself, evidence of an abnormal state of affairs in the business world. We do not yet know, in many cases, what will be the permanent operation of the McKinley tariff upon prices. Perhaps we may never know, for it may be repealed, or essentially modified, before these prices get into operation. The absurdity of the claim that this tariff is not to raise prices is shown, if in potling else, by the enormous importation it occasioned because of the certainty among importers that prices were to be raised. This has been a disturbing element in the market.
When the price of an article is quoted, in order to justly estimate the effect of the tariff on this, it is necessary to know the extent of the importation of that article in anticipation of the tariff. Such importation is keeping the cost of articles down even now. Stocks have been laid in sufficient to last many months in a good condition of markets. Thus there have been large overstocks. This is in itself enough to destroy a good market.
With a bad market has come depressed trade and the necessity of crowding goods into sale at inadequate prices.
Low rates indicate distress in business more than anything else.

The first ten months of the McKinley

Low rates indicate distress in business more than anything else.

The first ten months of the McKinley tariff thus show that its supporters, in justifying its effects in operation, dwell chiefly upon its free trade feature. These months prove business to be depressed beyond what it was when the tariff was passed or when it went into operation. They show that, if the intention of those who framed it is realized from such operation, the McKinley tariff must be odious without relief, and they give grounds for the belief that only mitigation of this odium comes from accidental and temporary features in the working of the law.

A Valuable Formula,—Pemberton: "I'd like to know some way of asking a father for his daughter so that I wouldn't feel badly in any event." Remsen: "Do as I did; ask him to give you the refusal of her."—Kate Field's Washington.

A Personal Sermon.-May: "So the Rev. Mr. Thirdly was proposing to you was he?" Belle: "Oh, no; he was just preaching a personal sermon." May: "Indeed! What was his text?" Belle: "Gen. ii, 18, 'It is not good for man to be alone.'"—N. Y. Herald.

"I look upon you, sir, as a rascal."

COOPER AND SPIRITS.

WAS THE NOVELIST CONVERTED BY THE FOX SISTERS?

Seance in Dr. Griswold's Office Which Noted Men Were Present—Answers Through "Spirit Raps" Which Made a Profound Impression.

The statement by one of the "Fox girls," of Rochester rappings fame, declaring that all the spirit sounds and noises were caused by the cracking of her toe joints, leads me to give an account of a remarkable seance with these three girls at the time they will think count of a remarkable seance with these three girls at the time they paid their first visit to New York. After perusing it I think the reason will be satisfied, whatever of deception may have been practiced, that the toe joint story is an ineffable humbug.

It was in 1850 that the Fox girls came to New York, astounding reports having

It was in 1850 that the Fox girls came to New York, astounding reports having preceded them of the noisy visitation of the spirits which had literally compelled them to leave their home. Dr. Rufus W. Griswold, the author and critic, occupied rooms at that time in Broadway, between Bleecker and Houston streets.

w. Griswoid, the author and critic, occupied rooms at that time in Broadway, between Bleecker and Houston streets. These were on the first floor and held his large and valuable library.

He was an unbeliever in regard to the "rappings," not only so far as any spiritual influences prevailed, but with respect to the production of the sounds themselves, which he pronounced "all trick," It was proposed to invite these girls to meet a number of gentlemen at Dr. Griswold's rooms, where it was expected the "spirits" would be present, when we felt confident of exposing the humbug.

An intelligent audience.

The invitation was accepted. At the appointed hour the following gentlemen met in Dr. Griswold's apartments: J. Fenimore Cooper, George Bancroft, W. C. Bryant, the Rev. Dr. Hawkes, Dr. John W. Francis, Dr. E. E. Marcy, John Bigelow and myself. The three Fox girls came promptly. They were seated by a table, but not near enough to touch it. The company made a large circle around it, and we all impatiently waited for the performance to begin. Uter incredulity pervaded our little assembly.

A half hour passed and the spirits made no sign. The girls were repeatedly asked how soon they would begin to demonstrate. They replied gravely that the spirits were not under their control; that they had intimated they would be present—that was all they could say.

At length raps began to be heard, sounding like slight shocks from an electric battery. Questions were at once in order, and Dr. Francis took the floor. His interrogatories were leading ones, and at the end of a few minutes he resigned in favor of Dr. Hawkes, the Fox girls getting the best of it. With Dr. Hawkes, who had been bred a lawyer, things did not flow so smoothly with there but there were conventions.

girls getting the best of it. With Dr. Hawkes, who had been bred a lawyer, Hawkes, who had been bred a lawyer, things did not flow so smoothly with them, but there were several answers which excited surprise.

I was seated next to Mr. Cooper, and I perceived he exhibited much impatience with the constitution of the cons while the questioning was going on.
When Dr. Hawkes finished, Cooper exclaimed, "Let me have hold of them."
He began accordingly. Here are the questions and answers:

"Some years ago I lost a near relative.
Was it a male or a female?"
"A female."

'A female. "By a natural death or otherwise?"

"Please rap the number of years since the person died."

INDISPUTABLE EVIDENCE.

The rappings began. We all listened attentively, counting the number. As it ran from twenty to thirty, from thirty for the forty is forty to fifty. to forty, from forty to fifty, we began to hold our breath. The rappings stopped at fifty-eight. There was some discussion whether it was fifty-seven or fifty-eight, and it was rapped over again at fifty-sight.

and it was rapped over again at inty-eight.

I had watched Cooper narrowly. As the raps proceeded he became deadly pale. At the conclusion all eyes were turned on him.

"Gentlemen," said he, "when I was about two years old my sister was killed by being thrown from her horse. The years since then have been correctly years since then have been correctly years since then have been correctly rapped."

I saw that Cooper was profoundly affected. This did not, however, stop the proceedings. Mr. Bancroft suggested that the rappings should be transferred to the door, he being on one side and Bryant on the other. No questions were asked, but the raps came out strong. After some further experiments we adjourned with the feeling that we had not succeeded in "confounding the Fox girls," and we agreed that the least said about it the better.

Fenimore Cooper died about eighteen

Fenimore Cooper died about eighteen months after this occurrence. Two or three years later I was dining with Mr. Phinney of the book firm of Ivison & Phinney, and a near connection of Mr. Cooper's. In the course of conversation he asked me if I knew Cooper had become a confirmed spiritualist before his death. I said I did not. He assured me death. I said I did not. He assured me of the fact, but could not account for it. I told him I believed I could account for it, and I repeated to him what I have now recorded here.—Richard B. Kimball in New York Times.

Their Legs go on Forever

Their Legs go on Forever.

[Eugene Field in Chicago News]

A discussion then arose (at the corner book store) as to the evil effects of melodeon playing upon the muscular and nervous systems.

It was put in evidence that Brother Blatchford had played the melodeon so much in his earlier years, and had operated the foot pedals of his great organ so much of later years that he now found it impossible to keep his legs in repose, his feet having become so accustomed to motion that they now continuelly and involuntarily kept treading away. It was said that it was possible to distinguisha Lynn girl by the same means, the girls living in Lynn having been brought up in the shoe factories, where they operated sewing machines, becoming duly sfflicted with an involuntarily motion of their legs and feet, so that' even though they would fain appear in repose, they could never possibly refrain from that movement of their nether limbs, which gave to them an appearance of walking, even though they were sitting down.

This curious affliction, it was recalled by Mr. Way, had been alluded to by Dr. Holmes in one of his merry skitis: Of Yankee girls the girls of Lynn Are vill esteemed most elever:

Wednesday, at his home in Cambridge, removes the foremost American man of letters, and almost the last of the brilliant group of writers who have made Boston the literary centre of the country. His country may well be proud of him, and his writings have had an important influence on its history. Although literary subjects were a favorite theme with him, and his essays are the fluest things of their kind, yet his political writings made him most widely known, and 'The Bigelow Papers" cannot be neglected by any who wish to know the causes that led to the birth of the anti-slavery party. His interest in public affairs was always keen and his political essays a few years ago proved that his insight into political affairs had not been dimmed by age nor by a long residence abroad. He was too great a man for any political party, and his keen probing of corrupt, places and public abuses made the guilty ones wince. Personally, he was one of the most delightful of men, and his pupils, during his professorship at Harvard, have a very keen remembrance of his great fund of information on any subject which might come up, and the keen and im-pressive way in which such information was put. It is pleas int to know that his high rank as a scholar and writer was acknowledged as freely abroad as at home, and that he had received the highest honors from the great English Uniwersities and from the educated people he met during his life abroad. He helped to make the literary fame of New England, and he lived to enjoy the high reputation he had so honorably won.

CLERK MCLAUGHLIN of the House has been several years of service, and has seen a very valuable and efficient official, but the fact that the salary is a comfortable one has long made the posses-sion of it by a Democrat a source of heart-burning, envy and dissatisfaction with certain followers of Mr. Flanagan of Texas, who believe that the offices what they are here for. There has been a word of fault found with Mr. McLaughlin and all agree that he is trustworthy and capable, but these envious ones can not understand why a Democrat should be allowed to draw a salary, when it might be drawn by a Republican. The Milford Journal has been in no end of trouble over the matter, and now a small clique of Boston politicians has taken it up and they think it would be a good idea to boom Secretary E. B. Hayes of the Young Republican Club for the place. The plan has often been tried before, but the efficient clerk has been retained and in probability he will be in the future.
ne majority of Republicans believe in civil service reform, although a few in the party do their utmost to prove that the spoils are all that the party is here for. Fortunately they only attract at tention in the dull season of the year.

THE drift towards Mr. Crapo seems to since last week and there are signs of an earnest effort to boom young Mr. Allen of Lowell, which may or may not be successful. Mr. Crapo is too much of a man to suit some of the party leaders, and as governor he would be his own master, and his age and experience in public life would give him greater influence than any young man could hope is a United Stat Senatorship in prospect, and some of the aspirants fear the effect upon their own chances if such a man as Mr. Crapo were governor. And in this they are probably wise, as Mr. Crapo would make an excellent candidate for United States Senator, and is much better qualified to fill it than Congressman Lodge, for instance. Nevertheless, the Crapo boom has gathered such headway, that it will be a difficult matter to head it off, and his nomination would be of great benefit to the party in this fall's campaign.

A correspondent gives the other side of ne case of Judge Brewer, in an article published this week, and shows that according to the law, he could have made no other decision than the one to which Mr. Partridge objected. The correspondent says that Judge Brewer is a strong temperance man, but he is also a good lawver, and in making a decision. lawyer, and in making a decision, a judge has to consider the laws governing the case and not his personal sympathies, something which critics do not always consider. Mr. Partridge, however, has the courage of convictions, and is willing to take the responsibility of making his statements over his own

A gentleman who has been travelling about a good deal this summer, says that Newton people are very pervasive. He has not visited a summer resort, however small, or gone on an excursion steamer, or stopped over in any city, but he has found at least one person from Newton, and generally half a dozen from some part of Newton were found enjoy-ing themselves. He thinks that the ing themselves. He thinks that the Newton people are great travellers and this is proved by a glance at the local columns of the GRAPHIC.

THERE is a very interesting rumor that Congressman Lodge has made his peace with Speaker Barrett, and if true, it shows that Mr. Lodge is wise. Mr. Barrett is in a position to make it very uncomfortable for his enemies. It is said that the terms of the treaty provide that Mr. Lodge shall succeed Senator Dawes, and that Mr. Barrett shall go to Congress and that Mr. Barrett shall go to Congress and then become governor. An inciden-tal provision of the treaty is that Mr Crapo shall be elected governor and in time succeed Senator Hoar.

Boston:

The Hon. Nathan Matthews, jr., the young Democratic Mayor of Boston, has shied at fame, and refused to accept the honor of having a ferryboat named after him. Strange that any man should not be happy to go down to posterity as plying between East or South Boston and Boston proper—not that all Boston is not highly proper—ad being divided into a Ladies' Cabin and a Gents' Cabin. Mayor Matthews is too fastidious.

THE New England Homestead has reports from 1000 of the special apple regions of the country, from which it predicts a heavy shortage in winter apples. There is a large crop of fall apples, but winter ones will be quite as scarce as last year.

Boston has a tax rate this year of $12.60; Malden $15; North Adams $18.50; Natick $18.40; Milton $8; Framingham $16; Dedham $18.60; and Needham $14. Newton's rate is evidently no larger than that of the majority of the suburban cities.

THE Suburban Press Association has accepted the invitation of Congressman Lodge to visit him at Nahant on August It is entirely a social affair, of WALTHAM is discussing the project of a river carnival this fall, and to have it at an earlier date than heretofore, which would add to its popularity certainly.

NATICK's tax rate is $18.40 a thousand and a good many people think that that is a pretty high price to pay for the privilege of living in Natick.

SKETCHES OF THINGS AND PEOPLE.

IN THE BACKWOODS OF CALIFOT IA.

Among the Mountains.

But while we have been talking about hounds here we are half-way up a long, up-sloping, shadowy canon, with great trees bending over it as if to form a true Wordsworthean retreat.

The ground is thickly strewn with The ground is thickly strewn with fragrant pine-needles. Around us the trees stand whispering a welcome and hold out friendly hands to us.

The tall pines stream with moss like banners until we can only say with our Longfellow:

"This is the forest primeval; The murmuring pines and the hemiocks, Bearded with moss, and, in garments green, it distinct in the twilight, Stand like Druids of eld, with voices sad and Stand like harpers hoar, with beards that rest on their bosoms."

on their bosons."

How many times have those words been in my heart and on my lips as I have wandered alone through those whispering groves of Dodona and tried to gather their messages for me.

For you know that for every lover of nature there is a voice, a message in the music of wind, and wave and torest, an articulate speech that "ediles into his darker musings with a mind and healing sympathy."

Sympathy, sympathy, sympathy, sympathy, stand un-truly these groves are yet the temples of the living God, and he who can stand un-moved amid such scenes as these is like one that hath no love of music in himself, and is fit for treasons, stratagems and spoils."

for these old splintered scarred granite peaks.

It was an old, rough spoken but truchearted miner who was once prospecting for gold up a side canon of the Big Horn mountains. He was alone, tired, hungry and almost discouraged for he had not "struck" anything very promising. But after awhile he had worked his way gradus'ly to the very top of "the divide," and as he looked out over the magnificent prospect of mountain, valley, plain and river, stretching away for miles on either hand, he forgot his hunger, his wearlness, his disappointment, and snatching his old battered nat he waved it over his head shouting "Hurrah for God!" It was plainly put, but could not have been expressed more concisely, more forcibly, even by a Byron, a Wordsworth, or a Bryant.

F. Borrox.

Borers of the city artesian well at Fort dworth, Tex., are of the opinion that the drill will soon penetrate a huge volume of boiling water, as the temperature increases with every few feet they go down, and at last accounts was 121 degs. at a depth of 2,900 feet.

By the will of Leslie Frederick Morpan, of London, four-tenths of his estate, valued at $250,000, is to be divided into four equal shares and distributed among the poor or any deserving charities of Philadelphia, St. Louis, Chicago and San Francisco.

A Terrible Appetite.

A prominent physician of Louisville claims to have a case which is unique in the history of medicine, and is that of a child of six years old which has developed an appetite for her own blood. The child is that of respectable parents, who are exceedingly sensitive on the subject of the little one's unheard of characteristics, and their reluctance to have the matter made public has prevented the doctor reporting the case for the benefit of the profession. He has, however, taken into consultation a famous English physician, who agrees with him in pronouncing the case unparalleled. The child is an intelligent little girl, of a gentle disposition and apparently quite healthy. When asked why she wants to suck her blood she declares she is thirsty for it and cannot help doing it. Her singular appetitis is of only wants to suck her blood she declares she is thirsty for it and cannot help doing it. Her singular appetite is of only about six weeks' duration, and was first noticed by her mother finding her one morning bathed in blood, with a wound torn in her forearm.

Supposing a rat had bitten her the doctor was summoned, who, questioning the child, was horrified to hear her frankly state she had inflicted the wound herself. She has repeated the act some half a dozen times since at irregular intervals, and narrowly escaped bleeding to death on one or two occasions. She has been severely punished for the act, but to no avail. Her parents declare that there is nothing in the family history to explain the thing. It is thought the child will outgrow the morbid appetite.—Philadelphia Times.

To Obviate Trolley Poles.

To Obviate Trolley Poles.

If the invention of Dr. Bates, of this city, stands the test of experiment the entire electric railway system of overhead wires and poles will soon be superseded by a simple conduit bolted to the center of the track. Some such invention is greatly needed. The overhead maze of wires is a constant source of delay and danger. The place for all electric wires, whether for railways, telegraphs or telephones, is underground, or properly insulated and protected in conduits, as proposed by Dr. Bates.

The main difficulty to be apprehended with the new invention is with snow and ice in winter. The slot which admits the trolley arm from the car into the conduit is protected from rain and dust the trolley arm from the car into the conduit is protected from rain and dust by a steel strip which acts with a spring. If this strip and spring can protect the slot alike from rain and dust in summer, and from snow and ice in winter, the invention may prove to be one of the most important in years. President Lowry deems the invention to possess considerable merit, and will undoubtedly give it thorough trial.—Minneapolis Tribune.

His Hair Quickly Bleached in a Caver William Gormly is a farmer in Hick-ory township. He has been making a tunnel in the side of the hill to a spring for the purpose of carrying water to a field below. John Grimes was employed to dig the tunnel.

When he had proceeded about thirty feet into the hill, and was about twenty feet from the surface, he found himself in a cavelike hollow, the roof of which was rock, in which there was a crack from which he could see light. When he reached the hollow, or cave, the hill apparently sank in where he had been digging, and he found himself a prisoner twenty feet under ground. He called digging, and he found himself a prisoner twenty feet under ground. He called for help, and later Mr. Gormly procured assistance, and, after working all night, released him, after being in the hole eighteen hours.

Mr. Grimes' hair was jet black when he entered the tunnel, but it turned snow white during the time he was imprisoned.—Cor. Pittsburg Dispatch.

The Ice Cure.

About two years ago a contributor to The North American Review called at-The North American Review called attention to the hygienic value of refrigeration, and predicted that climatic fevers would yet be cured in ice cooled hospitals. That prediction seems to have been verified by an actual experiment. Havana papers publish circumstantial reports from Santiago de Cuba where a Spanish physician is treating, and in. ports from Santago de Cuba where a Spanish physician is treating, and invariably curing, yellow fever patients in a camera polar (polar chamber), i. e., in a sanitarium reduced by means of ice to a temperature nearly 40 degs. below the average of the outdoor atmosphere. The result appears plausible enough, and the only nuzle seems why Vaples en.

"when that hath no love of music in himself, and is, it for treasons, stratagems and spoils."

It is no insignificant fact that the men who have mounded the world's philosphical, religious and literary thought from Plato to Carlyle, were men who love a nature.

And it is an impressive thought that Christ himself was a lover of nature, and often retired from his disciples and the thronging multitudes, to be alone at night under the quiet stars, in the desert solitudes; upon the mountain; by the murmuring lake-shore, or in the thick shadows of the old olive trees in Gethsemane.

But now we stand at last upon the highest peak in all the brotherhood of peaks about us.

We are in the midst of a billowy ocean, where every wave is a mountain ridge fixed and unmovable. Oh how I love these green ridges, that stretch away on every hand.

You who have not lived amid mountains, cannot realize the sympathy, the affection that grows up for them in the heart of one who has been among them for years.

Ask the Swiss what he misses most when asway from home and he will tell you "the mountains."

And so as I stand amid these old "hillis rock-ribbed and ancient as the sun," my leart goes out in love toward them and I catch an inspiration from their presence.

And I remember how Phillips Brooks said one day "when I am in right relations with all the laws of nature and of my being I am a profiler to the stars, the mountains of the flowers." Truly there is something of the flowers. Truly there is something of the flowers of nature and of my being I am a profiler to the stars, the mountains of the flowers. Truly there is something of the flowers of the flowers of the care of the flowers. Truly there is something of the flowers of the flowers of the flowers of the flowers. Truly there is something of the flowers of the flowers. The flower of the flowers of broke Milford's long string of victories in a game full of loose fielding and brilliant playing.

The Newtons Saturday afternoon broke Milford's long string of victories

The game was called at the end of the eighth inning because of darkness.

Parks was effective and Sherman pitched a good game. The play of Bowen in left field was a fine feature, his catch off Quinlan's bat in the fourth being phenomenal. His batting was also very timely, leading both teams. Bemis' errors were very costly, being directly responsible for three runs. Milford also lost chances to score by loose base running and bad catching.

Jenison and it is hoped that the thief will be apprehended.

—The storm Wednesday afternoon was quite severe. The air was heavily charged with electricity, and boits of lightning struck several houses in the vicinity of the West Newton station of the Boston & Albany railroad, A huge elm tree on Elm street was struck and two employes in the ticket office at the depot were thrown out of their chairs by the force of the shock and somewhat bruised. The hack horses at the station crouched down like rabbits while the storm was bassing over, and manifested unusual fright. Bolts struck S. A. Langley's house on Margin street, John Leonard's house on Putnam street and Jerry Smith's house on North Prospect street. The chimneys were knocked off at Langley's and Leonard's and a bolt passed through the roof of one of the chambers and the pantry of Smith's house. Every dish in the pantry was broken. The woodwork was charred but not set on fire. An elm tree at the corner of Elm and River streets was struck and a limb torn off. The storm lasted about 15 minutes, the wind blowing with great violence. The damage, however, was not serious.

—Richard Mills runs a barber shop in Murphy's block off Watertown street and also keeps a line of tobacco and cigars for sale. He closed his shop at midnight last Saturday and did not again visit the place until Monday morning, when, to his surprise, he found a light of glass in the back window had been broken and the window unlocked and opened, but again carefully closed. Some seven or eight dollars' worth of cigars and tobacco had been stolen, but nothing more. Fortunately Mr. Mils had emptled his money drawer when closing Saturday night. The police have a slight clue and some of the boys who are now enjoying the fragrant Havana at Dick's expense may have to take a vacation shortly at the expence of the state.

The hot weather during the past week

pense may have to take a vacation shortly at the expence of the state.

The hot weather during the past week has had a tendency to largely increase the travel on the harbor boats and in no case has it been more marked than on the steamer "DeBary" running to Nahant. It is only surprising that there do not more people got this beautiful place. The sail to and from is delightful. The steamer takes a distinct course from the other harbor boats keeping well over towards the East Boston shore down past Apple Island and through Shirley Gut, which is barely wide enough to permit her to pass; this portion of the trip, although made with perfect safety, always proves a thrilling experience to the passengers. From Point Shirley it is a short sail on the broad ocean to Nahant, giving one a fine view of the Winthrop shore, now so thickiy settled and along the entire coast of Lynn. From a standpoint that fakir-stands, venders or whips, peanuts and all sorts of trash go to make a place popular. Nahant has no attractions, but for cool breezes and quiet retreats along the shore where small parties may enjoy themselves unmodested, it has no equal. Here thousands may disport themselves fishing from the rocks, boating or bathing in the many safe places, which nature has pravided, or with book or paper, enjoy the shade of one of those for those of the found on our coast. In order to accommodate the increasing travel on Sundays, the steamer's trips have been increased.

A New York drummer once stopped at a cross roads tavern in Texas for dinner. The coffee was so thin you could read a paper through it, and the landlady as she put down the cup, said: "I'm afraid, mister, you will find this rather weak." "It's all right," said the drummer as his eye counted the grounds in the bottom of the cup through the amber liquid, "It's all right and don't bother. If your coffee is weak fyour butter is a wfully coffee is weak your butter is awfully strong, and the general average will do very well."

This is how Hannibal Hamlin travelled from Maine to Washington in 1842: from his home to Portland he went by stage-coach; from Portland he went to Boston by boat, then to Norwich by rall; from the latter place he crossed the sound to Greenport, and from there took the Long Island railroad to New York; from the latter place he again took the railway to Philadelphia; from that point he made the best of his way by boat and stage-coach to Baltimore, and at last reached the capital by rail. Arriving in Washington, he found a straggling, dilapidated town of less than twenty thousand inhabitants.

A LITTLE LOVE-AFFAIR.

A STORY IN ONE CHAPTER, BY THE AUTHOR OF "A BROKENE NGAGE-MENT," ETC., ETC.

(From Cassell's Magazine.)

A window in my study stood open to the fresh spring weather. I sat listless by it, holding in my hand a letter which had smitten into my heart a new pain, but one that I had long foreseen. wife had read it with me, and then she had kissed me on the forehead, and left room without a word. Lucy was just room without a word. Ludy was just across the lawn, tending some very special chickens that she had there in a run. I watched her till she turned and came towards the window, her sweet young form set against a background of sweet spring foliage. She came and knelt down beside me, and I drew her towards me, and said. towards me, and said .-

"I have a letter from India, my love. Colonel Penrose is coming home for a short furlough. He says he shall be in England early in June, and he hopes to come down at once to see us." The slightest possible flush came over her face, and after a pause she replied,-"In June? We shall be at Hastings

"Yes," I said. "I shall send a note to his agents to tell him so, and I dare say he will come down to see us there."
"That will be nicer for him than com-

"Oh, father!" she said presently, "could I ask Sophie Rayner to come to us at St. Leonards? Will mother be well in some terrible trouble, though she hasn't told me anything about it, and she has been so ill that she has had to give up all her work.

I was a little puzzled by this outburst of sympathy for a young lady to whom Lucy had never shown herself especially Lucy had never shown herself especially devoted. She was her old schoolfellow, and now a governess in the same school at Warwick. She had spent part of a summer holiday with us there years before, and my wife and I were not particularly fond of her. I demurred rather to the proposed invitation.

"Oh, but it is so wretched for her, father! She says Miss Moulton was just as kind as she could be, but she couldn't possibly stay there when she wasn't able to do apy work at all, and now she's in some horrid lodgings in Birmingham, all alone. You know she has no home, and hardly any friends; and I'm sure I don't know what she's living on now."

It was a pitful appeal, and alletter that was brought out and submitted to me bore it out, and was, moreover, marked with a note of quiet dignity that surprised me, in the writer. This put a new color on the proposal, and I told Lucy she might, at all events, speak to her mother about it.

I had not much doubt how it would then be decided.

These two women were in perfect accord for any act of kindness. and their

"It was your brother!" she said. "I knew his face quite well, but I could not remember where I had seen him. It was the gentleman, father, who rescued our luggage from those horrid porters while you were looking for a cab."

I thanked Miss Hopwood for her brother's service, and hoped we should see them again. She seemed to prefer the present opportunity for improving an acquaintance, and walked on with us to Warrior Square. This was really fortunate, for we met her brother shortly, so that I was able to renew my thanks to him personally. Mr. Hopwood was a frank, open-faced young man of about eight-and twenty, who looked well in the flannels for which his tennis racket was a sufficient justification. He was old enough to be companionable, and could talk sensible, so that I found him a pleasant enough acquaintance, and in a very few hours something like an intimacy was set up between the two families.

I found, however, that I did not enjoy much of the society of young Hopwood. He was in high favor with the children; he organized boating parties and expeditions to Fairlight and other places; be taught Lucy and Hal to row, and Hal achieved the stupendous feat of driving a pair of horses for two miles along a level stretch of the Battle road. The days slipped rapidly by. My wife din not like the Hopwoods. "I wish Sophie Rayner could have come with us," she said one day; "I think Lucy would not have been so much taken up with this girl then." I was rather surprised at it myself after the very cool greeting with which she had first received her.

"What time is George coming?" asked Hal one morning at breakfast.
"At half past ten, I think," replied Lucy; "he said ; the tide would be just right then." I was rather surprised at it myself after the very cool greeting with which she had first received her.

"Inose Hopwoods are old Irlends, I suppose?" I laboriously explained the situation, received a rather stiff "Good-night, old boy," and a grip of hand which alone saved me from despair, and walked home feeling very miserable. I guiltily kept this back from my wife, whom I found already fretting over the events of the day.

"I wish that Sophie Rayner hadn't come," she grumbled; but the inconsistency was too much, alike for her gravity and her grief, and a very uneasy laugh brought a little relief to our gloomy thoughts.

I have a very hazy recollection of the two days that followed. Lucy was inscrutable. Her mother watched her keenly, but sadly confessed to me that she could make nothing of her. Penrose was courteously repelling. I felt a longing now and then to break out into some contemptuous remark about young Hopwood, but could not speak. A new fear of my old friend and junior possessed me. He often walked with Lucy, who was timid and shrinking in his presence, but there was no trace of tenderness in his manner with her; he treated her with a lofty courtesy. At times I thought he looked worn and wearied when he had been with her; he might have been bored. To Sophie Rayner he aiways showed the same air of protection as at the first.

This young lady speedily found her way into all our hearts. My wife soon repented of her peevish remark about her that I have recorded. The colonel's manner was not to be mistaken long. The first movement of jealousy, however, was succeeded by a puzzled doubt. "What can Edward be thinking?" she asked me; 'what does he mean?" And I could not find it in my heart to tell her yet about his allusion to the Hopwoods. After all, I argued with myself, they would soon be back, and he would see in a day or two that his fears were unfounded. But then a question thrustitiself in—were they really unfounded? In any case, I found my selfonging for their return quite as much their departure.

I Her dislike was clearucy was speaking caught her once, as Ler with a strange of them, looking at he with a strange of them, looking at he rough and the her activation at the earliest opportunity. This was the third morning after her arrival. She and Lucy went o

"I have just come to say good-night," said Lucy simply; "I am going to bed." After kissing us she went up to Penrose, and taking both his hands, which somehow found hers at once, she said timidly, "I want to thank you so much, Colonel Penrose, for being so kind to Sophie, and for sending that—that man away." He bowed his head, and was silent for some minutes after she was gone. Then when the candles were brought in he and I went out together, and my wife went up into the girls' chamber, where the three, no doubt, behaved very foolishly together.

My friend and I sauntered down to the say, where the moon, rising in the pale summer sky, made a broad pathway of glory towards us. We stood leaning on one of the groynes, watching it. At last Penrose broke a long silence by say-ing.—

Penrose broke a room ing.—
"I knew what sort of man that was; I met him in the smoking-room at the Victoria the first night I was here, and I had some difficulty in keeping my hands from him then."
"I think you might have told me," I said.

of from him then."

"I think you might have told me," I said.

"Well, I felt a delicacy about it; I didn't know how far—I mean I thought I had better wait till he came back from Eastbourne, and then if it seemed necessary, or I could see my way to it, I would warn you of his character. But Miss Rayner saved me the trouble."

"Yes," I said vaguely, "her trouble has done us good service; my wife is thinking of asking her to come and live with us if——"

I stopped short; I had nearly blundered into saying something that I would not for worlds have uttered just then; so I stammered on,—

"You see, we feel so very grateful to her; she has done us such a service."

I saw him look at me keenly in the moonlight.

"You don't think—"he began, and then paused as if to choose his words—
"that Lucy was drawn towards that fellow?"

What could I say?

"You are an old fool, Malpas," he said, laying his hand on my arm; "and so am I, for that matter. I thought so myself until she said good-night to me just now."

A load was lifted off my heart as he spoke.

Just now."

A load was lifted off my heart as he spoke.

And what do you mean to do?" I

"And what do you mean to do?" I asked.
"I mean," he asid simply, "if you have no objection, to ask Lucy to be my wife."
"I could only press his hand."
"But not just yet."
"Why not?" I asked.
"Well, I should feel as if I were taking an advantage of her."
"But why?" I persisted.
"I hardly know," he answered; "but I should feel so. Can't you trust me, Malpas?
"I can trust you with Lucy's happiness," I replied.
It was only a week after all, before he spoke his mind. In the twilight of another evening I came into the drawingroom, where Lucy and her mother were sitting hand in hand; and when the child came to me and folded her arms about me, laying her fair head on my breast, I knew perfectly well what she meant. But she had something to say in sweet, low tones.

But she had something to say in sweet, low tones.

"Father, I have been telling mother all about it. I know I was very strange. I seemed to know quite well what he was coming for, and I was so atraid. I knew what you would think about—that man, and I thought he would think so too, and then, too, I did not think I really loved him until he did that for Sophie. And then I knew."

I kissed the fair bowed head, and as I did so the old mingled feeling of pain and joy came back to me with full force. So after some months our sweet one sailed away to her new home, and Sophie reigned in her stead, for a while, as elder sister.

American Rural Life a Century Back.
A curious old letter has been unearthed by the Troy Times, which was printed in the Northern Centinel and Lansingburg Advertiser in 1787. Abraham Jenkinson, the writer, was a farmer of respectability in that region who bemoaned the growing tendency toward extravagance manifest in the rising generation. Farmer Jenkinson's daughter Sarah, had been a flagrant sinner in this respect. Being sent to Albauy to sell a tub of butter and with the privilege of spending the proceeds as she would, the giddy Sarah, instead of buying "a brass kettle, pewter, or some other furniture which might serve her when she got married," invested every sixpence in "a whole heap of knick-knacks, seven or eight yards of flaming red ribband, a pair of white silk gloves and a whole heap of gauze," But it appears that Sarah after all was cleverer than her father in the matter of getting married for later on the old man states that "in a little while her caps and ribbands were flounced up after her own fashion and she goes dancing here and there with a parcel of young fellows/golish as herself," Another matter, too, greatly concerned good Farmer Jenkinson and that was the increased number of "petty merchants," who are described as "lazy young fellows, too proud to work," setting up "for shop-keepers and even for gentlemen," "I really hope," wrote Mr. Jenkinson, "our Legislature will pass a law next winter by which all such pests of society may be indicted as public nuisances and the privilege of shop keeping in the country be granted only to a certain number of widows and people too weak to work for their living." All of which furnishes the people of a later century a pleasing little picture of American rural life in the year preceding the birth of the Republic unear the constitution.

Rescued Seventy Years Ago.

Captain Nathaniel Richards, who has been a whaler all his life, until old ago forced him to give up the sea, was the guest of the officers of the United States frigate Constellation on Sunday evening at dinner. Captain Richards is in his ninety-fourth year, and what makes his yigit remarkable is that it was the Constellation which rescued him from the Chilians seventy years ago. In 1821 Captain Richards sailed from Stonlington on a sealing voyage. He got around to the coast of Chilit, was captured with others while ashore, was taken to the interior and put to work in the mines.

For six or seven months he toiled for his masters, brutally treated and half starved. At last an opportunity offered for escape. He made for the coast, hotly pursued, but he reached there, and stealing a boat he made a long and perilous voyage until the Constellation came into view. He was taken on board and ate his first hearty meal since leaving his own vessel. He remained on board until the frigate returned home.

own vessel. He remained on board until the frigate returned home.

the frigate returned home.

This incident came to the knowledge of the officers of the vessel now in the harbor, and they sent a courteously written invitation to the aged seaman requesting the pleasure of his company at dinner. Captain Richards accepted, and the Constellation's steam launch took him from the shore to the frigate, where he was received with due honors. He was seated at the post of honor, and the officers made much of him. As the old gentleman's mind is clear and his old gentleman's mind is clear and his memory retentive, he did his share in memory retentive, he did his share in making the event an interesting one for his entertainers. This is the first time he has seen the vessel since it brought him home in 1821.—New London Cor. New York Sun.

A Big Icicle Falls.

Monday a loud noise and slight shak-ing of the earth caused no little wonder-ment among the residents near the hill. Investigation proved the cause to be an ice slide. A small and innocent spring issues from the side of one of the moun assues from the side of one of the moun-tains, its waters spreading and flowing over a steep incline of rock. During the winter months ice formed against this wall of stone, increasing in size, until one vast cicle, fully 20 feet in thickness and 1,000 feet in length, projecting into

From the warmth of the sun and its From the warmth of the sun and its own weight it released its hold and thundered down the mountain side, carrying everything before it, even trees three feet in diameter. Those who have visited the place say that the foot of the cliff presents a mass of broken ice, trees, limbs and earth fifty feet in height.

This is a repetition of occasional occurrences in previous years, but on a grander scale.—Seattle (Wash.) Telegraph.

Electric Light Fishing

Electric Light Fishing.

The sloop Lou has gone on a novel fishing expedition to last from one to three months. An electric plant is on board, and the fishing is to be done by the aid of incandescent lights and a net. Experiments in the bay proved that everything alive under the water is attracted by the glare of the light, and thousands of fish of every description can be taken in a short time and with little trouble.

Four men were on board and the boat

Four men were on board and the boat Four men were on board and the boat steered for the banks near San Clement island. The practical result of the first voyage will be watched with much interest in this city, and if it is as successful in deep water as the experiments in the bay have been the projectors of the enterprise are confident they will have solved the problem of supplying all southern California with cheap fish.—San Diego Cor. San Francisco Examiner.

Dauger in a Tin Pan.

Mr. John Siverly bought a half pound of powder, a pair of shoes and a new tin pan in Moulton this week. He put the powder and shoes in the pan on his wagon and started home, but before he had gone two blocks from where he made the purchase the powder exploded, burning him terribly. His hat was blown ten feet high, his clothes burned almost entirely from his body, and his almost entirely from his body, and his face and arms burned as black as a negro's. There were only two persons on the wagon, neither of whom smoked or had a match about his person. The conclusion is that the powder was ignited from the rays of the sun concentrated. from the rays of the sun, concentrated to a focus by the tin pan. The sun was shining very hotly, and being thrown against the paper containing the powder by the bright inner side of the new tin, must have set the paper on fire.—Mobile Register.

A Sugar Eat in Midsummer

They had great times the other day in the quaint little village of Savoy, up in the Berkshire hills. Last spring Farmer Deming covered an immense snowdrift with hemlock boughs and sawdust, and a few days ago it was uncovered and a few days ago it was uncovered and utilized in a monster maple sugar "eat." The snow was as clean and white as when it fell, and generous quantities of the lucious bi—we mean maple sugar—were served to every one at the low price of twenty-five cents. Fun reigned supreme, and every one who has ever been present at a genuine New England sugar "eat" will regret that he was not one of Farmer Deming's guests the other day.

A Band of Boy Brigands.

A Band of Boy Brigands.

An amusing instance of the contagion of example has recently been afforded by a case in the Berlin police court reports. The outrage on the Turkish railway and the stories of brigands which have lately filled our newspapers seem to have acted on the imagination of two boys named Oscar Scheffner and George May. They determined to become bandits, and they prevailed on several of their schoolfellows to join them. The average age of the band was thirteen. They inaugurated their defiance of the law by boldly playing truant, and then they took refuge in the wilds of the Grunewald, where, in true brigand fashion, they hid themselves.

After a night passed in this fashion they felt the pangs of hunger, and consequently they sallied forth at an early hour and seized the milk cans and baskets of new rolls which had been left at the doors of the neighboring villas. This, however, they thought was scarcely heroic, and their next step was to garrote an old gentleman who was taking a morning stroll in the park. Somehow or other the Berlin police got wind of morning stroll in the park. Somehow or other the Berlin police got wind of the affair, and the juvenile bandits were seized. They are now languishing in grewsome dungeons, where, by means of a cane administered at intervals, it is hoped that they may be made aware of the historic fact that in northern Eu-rope brigandage is an anachronism.— Pall Mall Budget.

Argentine Frenchmen in Want.
The grant of the French government of 1,000,000 francs toward the expense of bringing distressed French emigrants in bringing discressed French emigrants in the Argentine Republic back to France is sufficiently significant of the inex-pediency of emigration to that country at this time. Mr. Herbert, British secre-tary of legation at Buenos Ayres, is clearly at one with the French authori-ties on this point, for he expresses a hope that the flow thither of British emigrathat the flow thither of British emigration may cease for the present.

The British colonist adds to other causes of failure a special difficulty in acquir-ing the language of the people. His com-petitor, the Italian laborer, on the conpettor, the Italian laborer, on the con-trary, owing to the similarity of the language, climate and habits of the country with what he has been accus-tomed to, feels himself comparatively at home on landing, besides finding himself surrounded by a large number of his countrymen.—Paris Cor. London Tele-

Vandals in the Adirondacks Visitors from the Chateaugay lakes, Adirondacks, says that the glory of that region of trout and deer has departed. Notwithstanding the liberal stocking Notwithstanding the liberal stocking that has been done every year, the trout are small and scarce. The miners use giant powder in the spring holes and on the spawning beds, and the hotel keepers are afraid to complain. In addition to this, many of the residents go up the side streams and catch fingerlings by the hundred. This is always fatal to good fishing. As long as the little fish are left undisturbed, the stock is kept up; but going up the little brooks and fishing them out is killing the goose that lays the golden egg.—Forest and Stream.

Voice Figures.

A coming "fad" or pursuit will be that of voice figures. A book on the subject has been written explaining and illustrating this new discovery of the forms produced by the human voice. At a recent reception in London some glass screens were provided, upon which, after certain preparations, were through the screens were provided, upon which, after certain preparations, were thrown the figures developed by the voice. These were very exact and well defined and resembled a plant or seaweed. We shall undoubtedly have these exhibitions in New York drawing rooms before another season has passed, as the subject is exciting much attention abroad.—New York Times.

California, from the Mexican frontier to the redwood regions of Mendocino county, has been visited by a sirocco of the ultra Mediterranean sort. In Fresno, the much advertised paradise of raisin culture and co-operative communities, the heat rose to 114 degs. in the shade; in Nagra to 110 degs.; in Sonoma to 109; in Healdsburg (on the Russian river, far north of San Francisco) to 108 degs. San Francisco itself escaped, thanks to the trrepressible counter currents of sea winds, but Sacramento, a little further inland, thought itself lucky to get off with 106.—Philadelphia Times.

The Ball Player in Bronze.

The baseball player has long been immortalized in the public prints, but it remained for Douglas Tilden, a deaf mute sculptor of San Francisco, to immortalize him in bronze. Not long ago he completed a handsome statue entitled "The Ball Thrower," and presented it to the city of San Francisco. The figure is of life size and is mounted upon a red granite base and a Mentone sandstone granite base and a Mentone sandstone pedestal four feet high. The site of the statue is south of the Garfield monu-ment in San Francisco's park.—Bloom-

A Good-Locking Face
We like to see. Yet Erysipelas disfigures the features and the disease is as dangerous as it is repulsive. It is sometimes called "St. Anthony's Fire," and often ends in sudden death. S. B.
Carpenter, Grandville, N. Y., had it in both legs and was cured by Dr. David Kennedy's Favor, ite Remedy, of Rondout, N. Y. This medicine excels all others for the blood.

Summer complaints and all bowel trouble are soon cured by Johnson's Anodyne Liniment

Articles known to medical science are used in preparing Hood's Sarsaparilla. Every ingrodient is carefully selected, personally examined, and only the best retained. The medicine is prepared under the supervision of thoroughly competent pharmacists, and every step in the process of manufacture is carefully watched with a view to securing in Hood's Sarsaparilla the best possible.

Look at Him.

A year ago he was not expected to live. Liver complaint almost killed him. He got great relief from three bottles of Sulphur Bitters, and six bottles cured him. – Editor Weekly Sun.

I suffered from acute inflammation in my nose and head—for a week at a time I could not see. I used Ely's Cream Balm and in a few days I was cured. It is wonderful how quick it helped me. Mrs. Georgie S. Judson, Hartford, Conn.

Almost Killed.

Almost Killed.

I was almost killed by the doctors, who treated me for bleeding piles. It cost me over $100 without relief. I took Sulphur Bitters for two months, and now I am well.—Gus Hall, Troy, N. Y.

It won't cost you one-half as much. Do not delay. Send three two-cent stamps for posage, and we will send you Dr. Kanffr un's great work, fine colored plates from liic, on disease, its causes and home cure. Address, A P. Ordway & Co., Boston, Mass.

e A.—"That is your little daughter, I suppose?" B.—"Yes; and a wonderful child she is." A.—"Really! How is that?" B:—"She is already six years old, and doesn't play the piano."

"Do you think I can see through you?" said the irate old gentleman to the burly man in front of him. "You ought to be able to, sir," returned the other, goodnaturedly; "I've a pain in my back."

Kicks—"So you think the ministers practice what they preach?" Hicks—"Why, yes; they preach sermons, and if you lived near one you could hear him practicing it a week beforehand."—Low-ell Citizen.

City Maiden (a summer boarder)—
"How savagely that cow looks at me."
Farmer Hayseed—"It's your red parasol, mum." City Maiden—"Dear me! I knew I was a little out of fashion, but I didn't suppose a country cow would notice it."

Young wife—"We are told to 'cast our bread upon the waters.'" The brute— "But don't you do it. A vessel might run against it and get wrecked."—New York Herald.

"I meant to have told you of that hole," said a gentleman to his friend, who, walking in his garden, stumbled into a pit of water. "No matter," said the friend, "I have found it."

Edith—"You can't imagine how Mr. Bulfinch complimented your singing." Ethel—"Did he, though?" Edith—"Yes, he said 'twas simply heavenly." Ethel—"Reaily?" Edith—"Well, just the same thing; he said 'twas simply unearthly."—Boston Courier.

Mrs. Leland Stanford's trust-deed, giving $100,080 to endow five kindergartens n San Francisco, is just filed. As the income will be five per cent, each school will get $1,000 a year. These schools are said to have already had an appricciable effect in reducing the number of "hood-lums" who infest the streets of San Francisco, and in bettering the condition of the districts.

Pot Pie Dumplings

Pot Pie Dumplings

By Mrs. Dearborn,

Principal Botton Cocking School.

Mix and sift together 1 pint pastry flour, 1 heaping tea sp. Cleveland's Baking Powder and 1/2 tea sp. salt. Beat 1 egg unit thick and light, add 1/2 cup cold water, stir this into the dry mixture, and enough more water to make a dough stiff enough to hold its shape when dropped from the spoon.

Drop the dumplings on a plate a little distance apart and cook in a closely covered steamer for fifteen minutes; or, drop them on top of the boiling steaw and cook for the same length of time.

The secret of having them light and tender lies in their not being disturbed while cooking, and in not having much liquid around them, if cooked on top of the stew.—(Copyright, 1891, by Cleveland Baking Powder Co.)

Use only Cleveland's baking powder,

—Messrs. F. G. Barnes & Son, real estate agents, have made the first sale of a building lot for the syndicate who recently purchased the Parker land on Newtonville avenue, Mt. Ida, to Abraham Garrison, of 12,000 square feet. Plans are out for the dwelling house, which is to be of wood and stone and an ornament to the locality. They have also sold a lot on Linder Terrace owned by Mrs. N. V. Walker, to Fred A. Leeds of the Youth's Companion office, who has plans out for the house, which will be of unique design. They have also sold at Auburndale the estate of J. Walter Davis on Fern street comprising dwelling house with 13,000 square feet of land, to T. E. Baker of Boston, who will soon occupy the same.

house with 15,000 square feet of land, to T. E. Baker of Boston, who will soon occupy the same.

—There was a brilliant hop at the Crosby House, Osterville, Saturday evening, held in the large boat house of the Crosby Bros. who build the famous Cape cat boats. The spacious hall was brillantly illuminated and decorated with flags and evergreens, and one end being open to the water allowed the vachts to come to the side, giving a beautiful moonlight picture. Among those present were the following from Newton: Mr. and Mrs. N. Ripley, Mr. Will Ripley, Mr. and Mrs. S. Welles Holmes, the Misses Harriet, Elizabeth, Gertrude and Katherine Holmes, Mr. Russell Ballou, Mr. Raymond Brackett, Mr. and Mrs. The Mrs. L. Leatherbee of Newton Centre, Miss Margaret Leatherbee, Miss May Edwards of Wellesley Hills.

—The death of Mrs. Gilman Brackett brought great sorrow to many friends, who loved her for her kindly disposition and beautiful character. Although a great sufferer for many years, she always had a cheerful word for her friends, and retained her interest in all that was going on about her. She has been a resident of Newton for some fifty years and was a prominent member of Channing church. Rev. Mr. Hornbrooke officiated at the funeral services on Thursday, and paid a high tribute to the deceased.

services on Thursday, and paid a high tribute to the deceased.

—Late Tuesday afternoon a succession of pistol shots were heard in the vicinity of the Italian camp, off California street, Newton. Officer Blue hastened to the spot and saw two men about 200 feet from the camp shanty, one of whom held a revolver. It is supposed that the fellow was firing at the Italians. The man with the pistol hastily departed, when he saw the officer, but his companion held his ground, and proceeded to demonstrate his ability as a puglist, hitting out from the shoulder for the officer's head, but the later fortunately doged. After a brief struggle the fellow was overpowered and taken to the central police station in West Newton. He gaye his name as Hoodgem Bojajian and claimed to be an Armenian. He stated that his companion halled from the same country, but would not give his name and denied any knowledge of the shooting. There were a few Italians in the vicinity at the time of the shooting, but it was impossible to get any particulars as they could not speak English. One of the Italians at the shanty said they had been annoyed of late by persons, evidently unfriendly, hanging around the camp, some of whom had used threatening language.

Death was caused by a cancer. Wm. Burt and family attended the funeral, which took place Thursday afternoon.

—A number of boys were caught stealing pears out of the orchard belonging to Miss S. Bemis on Bridge street, last Sunday morning. The police have been looking up the matter, and as a result those whose names were learned will be brought before the Newton police court.

—On Tuesday morning a boy named Dwyer, while fishing at the bridge run a fish hook into his finger in such a manner that all efforts to get it out by those who were near only worked it further in. Children who were with him told Dr. Utley who happened to be passing over the bridge. Le very kindly stepped from his carriage and cut the hook out. The little fellow stood it bravely, but was somewhat faint after the operation. Bert Hudson took him in his carriage and carried him to his home, where his mother dressed his wound.

WABAN.

—An alarm was sounded from box 52 at 3.55 o'clock yesterday afternoon for a fire in a barn belonging to Edward L.Collins. The building was a mass of flames before the arrival of the fire department, and a high wind made it impossible to save it and the structure was burned to the ground. It was leased by C. H. Hale and contained a quantity of hay and firewood and a horse stabled there, all of which was burned. Chemical B was the first piece of apparatus on the scene and paid for itself by its prompt work in extinguishing fire on the roof of a house, also owned by Mr. Collins and valued at $10,000, which caught from the barn. The fire was probably incendiary and the loss is estimated at $1500.

The estate of the late Thomas Ranney, Winchester street, near Newton High-lands, will be sold at auction, Saturday, country residence.

DESERTED THE TRENCHES.

LABORERS EMPLOYED ON THE SEWERS

The laborers employed on the construc-The laborers employed on the construc-tion work of the city's sewerage system failed to show up Tuesday morning. They were dissatisfied on account of ir-regular payments, and refused to go to work. The contractor is James Killion of Brighton, who has employed on the of Brighton, who has employed on the sewers nearly 400 Italians, furnished through the agency of Gauteano Viola of Boston. The men claimed there was 45 days' wages due them. They expected to get their money from Viola last Friday afternoon, but he failed to get the wherewithal from Killion. It was by his advice, it is said, that the Italians struck Tuesday.

Beside the Italians who have quit work voluntarily, others have been at least voluntarily, others have been at least temporarily, thrown out of employment, among them the foremen and inspectors. One of the foremen told a reporter temporarily, thrown out of employment, among them the foremen and inspectors. One of the foremen told a reporter that the work had been dragging along and that it was due in part to the lack of proper tools and machinery. "There is an unusual amount of ledge work, necessitating blasting," he said. "It requires special tools and machinery, which we have only been able to secure at intervals." A delegation of Italians went to Brighton to see Mr. Killion but he was not at home. He was seen Tuesday evening by a reporter, to whom he made the following statement:

"I have a sufficient amount on hand," he said, "to more than meet all liabilities. The amount due on my pay roll in Newton, for the month, amounts to $12,000. This sum is divided up between the Italian laborers and those of other nationalities, the foremen and gang bosses. There is about $7000 due the Italians. I am abundantly able to pay the $12,000, or five times that amount, and there is no truth in the rumor that I am unable to meet my obligations.

"It has been my custom to pay off the Italian laborers on the Newton sewers on the 11th of each month, but, for reasons which it is not necessary for me to explain, payments were delayed for a tew days. The men would have head their money Tuesday if the timekeeper had been on hand, but, as he was away I was obliged to defer payment until Wednesday. The men will undoubtedly resume work Thursday morning."

The total number of Italians who went out Tuesday figure up 351. These, added to the foremen and gang bosses, make a grand total of about 400 men.

On Wednesday Agent Viola, guarded by a posse of police, paid off they were much excited. They were dissatisfied because they did not receive the whole amount due them but the presence of the police kept them in check, and they were obliged to content themselves with what they got. Contractor Killion visited the camp yesterday, arriving there shortly before noon. His appearance was the occasion of a general timult. The men talked excitedly, and made a rush toward

Their object was to find Killion and to demand from him their wages. Nearly 400 men formed the procession, a motley crowd, attired in their rough working clothes, but quite orderly. The march of the men from the camp to Normandan square was a source of serious alarm to the residents. The women and children especially were badly frightened, and fears of a serious outbreak were entertained.

City Marshal Richardson has prepared for any ordinary emergency that may arise, and extra officers will be assigned to duty at the camp.

Since the establishing of the camp there has been very little trouble, and there has been no difficulty in handling the men until the recent dissatisfaction. Since the advent of the Italians in Newton no arrest of any of their number has been made.

Teach Girls to Swim.

On July 24th, Miss Bertie Burr, of Lin-colm Neb. saved the lives of two young women, friends of hers, with whom she had gone bathing in the river. She learned to swim last year at Lasell Semin-ary.

said: "half way down to camp by this time." I told him my boots were keeping company with his jacket; then we laughed and hoped that the weather would not be bad for his sake, nor the roads be bad for mine. We soon came to a field of thistles and to my horror the party turned off across this field. I scratched my feet a good deal and was glad to get on to the road again, where we rested awhile. But after following the road some ways, the party turned off into a field covered with blackberry vines. After walking a very painful mile, we came to a ravine about forty feet deep filled with sharp rocks and brambles; down that we had to go. When we got down my feet were bleeding and smartting badly; they rested for my sake and then went on. We came to a swamp about an eighth of a mile wide, filled in with old dead branches of all kinds. Over this we went, the branches cutting my poor legs dreadfully. It took me a long while to get over the swamp and caused delay. No one could help me, for it was all any one could do to walk alone. After the swamp, came a half mile of cordurory road; on that I got my feet full of splinters. Then came a clay road which was, as one of the boys put it, "a blessing to a bare-foot-boy." We had one or two more fields to cross, but they were easy, all except the grass stubs. Having now reached camp, we started for a swim. As we passed on through the woods which surround the shores of Lake Wachusett, going single file, Atkins who was in front of me, gave a yell and jumped ahead, and then went headlong down the path. I stopped, and Bates behind me said: "what is the m—;" he had not finished his sentence when he shrieked in my ear "hornets!" "hornets!" and started on the run back to camp. I made for the lake before I should get stung. Both boys in front and back of me were stung but I was'nt, though I had bare leg. After bathing we went back to camp for supper. I would have given a dollar for a box of cold cream or vaseline, my legs and feet smarted so, but I had to grin and bear it.

boxed it with her paws. After a while Mr. Tobin went out and brought it in. I grabbed it as it came over my way. On strobing it, it cuddled down and went to purring and to sleep. The rest of us followed its example, minus the purring. That cat stayed and slept with us all the time we were there.

The next day was a rainy one. We did little and put off our trip home till next day, which was Saturday. In the morning it rained. We waited awhile in hopes that it would clear but as it did not stop raining before ten o'clock, we started. It rained all day except a little while at noon. It stopped as if to let us have our dinner. We tramped through the mud and wet, which was up to the tops of the other boys' boots, but not of mine, for they were back at the N, H. Camp by this time. Bates as usual was making us laugh, his stockings and boots were wet, so he took Mr. Gray's extra ones and put them on; being too large he stuffed the boots with lay and trudged along to the tune of:

About one o'clock we stopped for dinner and nearly every one of us got among some poison ivy. It did not take effect, but the thought made me very uneasy, as I had been poisoned by ivy and dogwood several times. As we came near camp, we heard "tattoo," and about ten minutes after, we came marching in, singing "Glory! Hallelujah!" to Bates' fife. When we got to the flag-pole, we gave the camp yell, I went to my tent and sat down with my sore feet. I had tramped twenty-two miles in the rain without riding a step.

IN OUR OWN ALPINE REGION.

WHAT A TOURIST SEES.

The Green Mountains extending down from Vermont across the western part of Massachusetts, cut off from the east a section of country, the most picturesque in all New England; not so grand as the region of the White Mountains, but for grandeur and beauty combined surpassing any other portion of the Eastern States. The Hoosac Tunnel pierces the rocky barrier and makes a level pathway between the Deerfield and the Hoosick rivers which at North Adams ushers the traveller from the east into a lovely and fertile valley which, bordered with green hills and lofty mountains and dotted with fruitful farms and thriving villages, for a hundred and fifty miles north and south is the delight of the dwellers there and a joyful surprise to the appreciative stranger. Since the opening of the Tunnel, North Adams has grown from a small manufacturing village to a place of 15,000 or 16,000 inhabitants soon to be entered upon the list of Massachusetts' cities. Eighteen miles north of it is Bennington, of historic renown, just now attracting the patriotic thought of the whole country, and still further north, Rutland and other towns. To the south are Adams, Cheshire, Pittsfield, Great Barrington, Lee, and besides other places of note, Lennox, the Saratoga of Massachusetts, where the wealth and fashion of New York, lingering till the frosts appear, close their summer outings. No one can truly know what there is to be enjoyed in Massachusetts without visiting this delightful region. It is in all respects the opposite of the Cape district. The shore has its attractions district. The shore has its attractions and will always have its throng of visitors, but the mountain framed valley has charms also peculiarly its own. The lofty peaks, the forest crowned hills and green pastures on their sloping side, the cultivated farms, the lakes and ponds and waterfalls glistening in the sun, and the winding rivers stretching like silver ribbons through the fertile valleys, and by the roofs and spires of the apparently sleeping villages, make a scene of rural loveliness rarely surpassed.

GREYLOCK.

To the southwest of the village of North Adams, some three hours ride distant, and about as far from Williams College, rises the massive form of Mt. Greylock, the highest mountain in Massachusetts, lately made accessible by a good carriage road to the very top, on which a good hotel is kept open for the comfort of the hundreds, probably thousands, of visitors who ascend to the summit in the warm season. Not until this road was built and this house opened to the public were the grandeur and beauty of the views from this height generally known, but now that the ascent is made easy and the stay there comfortable, Mt. Greylock is becoming one of the celebrated places of resort for summer tourists. As the mountain is an object of special interest as seen from the valleys, the valleys are of still greater interest as seen from the mountain, and this whole region is not only attractive for its charming scenery, but it is rich with local and historical associations sometime to be woven into the legendary prose and poetry of the country. Here is a single illustration:

See, far along the western sky
Stretch wood-crowned summits, dark and bigh,

See, far along the western sky Stretch wood-crowned summits dark and bigh Beneath, the Berkshire valleys lie.

Near classic halls of Williamstown.
Those halls when youthful Garfield trod,
He climbed one day to Greylock's crown,
And from that lofty height looked down

And pledged his noble life to God, And to his native land below, For which his patriot heart did glow, On which his patriot blood was spilled.

When he had climbed the height of fame. And won the martyr's grown and name, His country saw that pledge fulfilled.

When he had climbed the height of fame, And won the marty? srown and name, His country saw that pledge failuled.

A NATURAL BRIDGE.

Almost everybody has heard of the Natural Bridge of Virginia, but comparatively few people know about the natural bridge in Massachusetts. It spans a smaller stream, but is nevertheless, an exceedingly interesting natural curiosity and marks a locality well worthy the attention of the curious. About two miles from the railroad station in North Adams a small stream comes down from the mountains which centuries ago on its way flowed over the rop of a thick limestone ledge, but in the process of time has worn for itself a channel, with perpendicular sides, in the solid rock sixty to seventy feet deep in places, at the bottom of which it now wends its devious way through the ledge to the river below, at one point passing under an overlying rock that completely spans and covers the deep channel and, over which hundreds of sightseers cross and recross the stream in safety. An open quarry that is worked near by makes the place conveniently accessible. Carriages can be driven to within a few rods of the bridge, and two or three diights of wooden stairs complete the ascent.

This rock is said to be the purest carbonate of lime found in the country, (98.2 per cent.) and therefore brings a high price when ground and botted as it is here till it is finer and whiter than any wheat flour. About 20,000 barrels or 5000 tons a year is ground at this mill and shipped to all parts of the country. It is used in chemical works, also for "skim" plastering, and it is said sometimes for giving bulk and weight to the cheaper kinds of candy. When rightly treated it makes the best of soda water. The works are owned by Mr. Edward Rand. The miller, who politiely showed us about the mill, Mr. W. H. Anderson, is a war veteran, and has filled his place here for some 27 years.

BENINGTON MONUMENT.

Knowing that we could not be present at the dedication on the 19th, we took our view of the Bennington Battle Monument before the great celebration. This structure and the event it commemorates occupy public attention just at present more than any other national object. The monument is located near where a building stood containing military stores to secure which was one object the British had in approaching the town. The site is about a mile and a quarter from the railroad station. It is an exceedingly good one, including some twenty or thirty acres, on the smooth, slightly sloping crown of the hill at the northern end of old Bennington Centre. The monument overlooks the new town at the east and all the region around, and can be seen from a distance in every direction. It is built of dark stone from the Saratoga quarries, is thirty-nine feet square at the base, and rises to the height of 201 teet, some 70 feet higher than Bunker Hill Monument, and from whatever point it is seen its dark form cuts the sky with clearest lines making it strikingly conspicuous and it deeply impresses the beholder with its loftiness and its grandeur. The inside which, notwithstanding the great thickness of the walls is quite roomy, is a hollow square around which winds a flight of easy iron steps, some 209 feet to the look-out or windows. Above this point, as seen from the outside, the shaft rises with a constantly increasing taper to the top, giving the upper part a slightly rounded or dome like appearance, not quite satisfactory to the eye accustomed to more regular architectural lines, but in spite of this peculiarity it is exceedingly interesting, and, with what it commemorates, deeply stirs one's patriotic feelings, Great preparations have been made for the dedication. There is a raised platform in front of the monument for invited guests, which will seat at least a thousand persons, and the handsome lawn extending far on every side will a BENNINGTON MONUMENT

Judge Lawrence, the president of the Ohio wool growers' Association, has written a letter to the American Wool and Cotton Reporter, in ceply to a com-munication of Mr Thomas Dolan, a Philadelphia woollen manufacturer, which appeared a shert time ago in the New York World. Mr Dolan said in his let-ter: "It is an interesting fact, deserving

The duties on woolens and worsteds are mixed duties—that is so much perpound by weight, which is the compensating duty, and so much ad valorem, which is protective duty. Now if Mr. Dolan's statements are to be believed, those whom he represented were well aware that the increase in the duties on first and second class wools would reduce the price of American wool, and on that account there was obviously less need than before of the so-called compensating duties. But, as a matter of fact, in drafting the woollen and worsted schedules Mr. Dolan and his friends insisted that the compensating duty should be increased, for the alleged reason that there had been an increased duty upon foreign wools.

To the Editor of the GRAPHIC Last Sunday we spent in dear delightful Intertaken, with its one straight street of hotels and fascinating shops, its delightful drives to Lauterbrunnen and Grendelwald, and its guardian Jungfrau beaming down on us "from a thron of rock, in a robe of mist and a corone of snow.

I for one left it with real regret, though that was forgotten in the pleasure of meeting Boston acquaintances at the top of the Burnig Pass, at noon. We found or the Burnig Pass, at noon. We found Lucerne weeping, and as it wept all the while we stayed, our pleasures were somewhat curtailed. On Taesday we ascended the Rhigi, a little queen mountain, not higher than Monadnock, and though we had fine views all the way up the clouds shut us in on every side at the the clouds shut us in on every side at the summit, so that we were reduced to the usual pastime of shopping, though the altitude added to the prices as well as the interest. We heard the grand organ in the Cathedral at Lucerne, at the 6.39 p. m. concert. The organist was evidently an eccentric, and I could not help wishing that one of our fine and sym-pathetic musicians could handle it for wishing that one of our fine and sympathetic musicians could handle it for our delectation. The vox humans stop is certainly wonderfully used, and we felt at times sure that an unseen choir was chanting antiphone; but the realistic thunder and lightning at the close failed to appeal to me; indeed I felt very much as I do when I see handkerchiefs freely used in our home theatres, over seme imaginary wees or trials, that the real glory of a tempest deserves far more admiration than such scenic effects.

The manmoth Lion of Lucerne, a memorial carved in the cliff side, to the validant Louis Guards, who died while defending Louis XVI and Marie Antoinette in 1792, was the chief charm of the city. Designed by Thorwaidsen and graven by Ahern in 1821, it bursts upon the view like a great picture, fronted by a tiny lake with circling swan, which serves to add to the effect, as well as berthe near approach of the tourist. It is about 30 feet long, in a grotto 45 feet long, couchant, with one giant paw still faithfully guarding the Feer-de-lis shield of the Beurbons, the spear which caused his death still protruding from his side, and his tace pathetic with agony, it is altogether a most magnificent memorial. We had a most beautiful ride the next day, (Wednesday, July 29th), through the St. Gothard Pass and tunnels, about 70 in sumber, including the wonderful long sunnel which took eighteen minutes in traesit, and is nine and a half swies long.

er may make the wool industry more profitable." While the altimate effect of an increaseed duty might be, he said, to give the consumer cheaper goods, the first effect would be to increase the price," and it was increased price and not decreased price for which he was laboring.

To have one of his associates in this work now publicly assert that it was well understood that the effect of the change would be an immediate decrease is the price of Ohio wool is in effect to discredit Judge Lawrence in the minds of those who had chosen him to represent their interests.

It may be t at, in the general campaign talk concerning the McKinley bill, the argument was made that the effect of it would be to decrease, and not increase, prices to American consumers. But to assert, as Mr. Dolan has, that the duties on foreign wool were increased for the purpose of reducing the prices of American wool, in view of the fact that the Ohio Wool Growers' Association was working night and day to secure this increased duty, is so thoroughly unreasonable that we cannot understand how any sensible man could have had the assurance to make it. More than this, Mr. Dolan is convicted of disingenuousness by the argument for which he and his associates were responsible at the time the wool and woollen clauses of the tariff law were framed. The representatives of the wool growers and the woollen manufacturers met together in Washington for the purpose of settling upon some basis of agreement, Having, after a great deal of discussion, decided that the duty, upon first class wool built for and occupied by merchants and saloon keepers, whose wares are most temptingly displayed, and most generously patronized. It is cruer-form, one end facing the cathedral, the other on Plaza La Scala, with the grand statue to Leonado Da Vinci, whose "Last Supper" we saw in the refectory of "Santa Maria della Grazie."

After a tiresome and uninteresting ride through and over the Appenines we reached Genoa, where we are to spend Sunday. Why it is called "La Superba" I cannot conceive, unless it were very different in the middle ages, for a dingier, dirtier, worse smelling place I never visited. The low Italian element abounds, not the picturesque Italia that wears Roman aprons, kerchiefs on heads, and grinds orchestrions in our streets but squalid, dirty English dressed.

Miles on miles of streets narrow and dark, lined with six story tenements that would rival our North End, led us to the Aucient Roman Gate, through which we passed, twelve carriages full of Americans, the observed of all, to the Campo Santo. This cemetery is like all others in Italy. A large marble cloisterlike gallery, round a hollow square of earth, where only the poor inter their dead, for the colonade is divided into niches for the colonade is divided into niches for the flore marble statues erected to the memory of the departed great and dear ones. The floor also is formed of tablets over two tiers of tombs. Here is the grave of Mazzini, whose statue decorates one of the public squares, facing an equestrian figure of Victor Emanuel. In one square, under our windows, is the statue to Columbus, whose souvenirs we saw in the City Hall, also the Paganini violin, in the holy of holies. There are also in the grand senate chamber very fine mosaic portraits of Columbus and Marco Polo. Altogether we are not in love with this city, where the horse cars go everywhere except on their tracks, obligingly turning out for any team which chances in the road; where pedestrians who are run over on the sidewalk-less streets are promptly arrested for get

A MYSTERY WHICH THE POLICE ARE TRY-ING TO SOLVE.

The finding of a male infant at Chest-nut Hill last Friday evening, may be followed by some interesting developments. says the correspondent of the Boston Herald. The police have discovered a clew which it is hoped will lead to the arrest of the person who abandoned the baby, apparautly leaving it to die. It was found in an isolated spot, separated was found in an isolated spot, separated from the nearest highway by a dense wood lot, bordering upon the tracks of the Boston & Albany railroad, and about midway between the Reservoir and the Chestnett Hill stations.

It was in the early evening, probably, that the little mite of humanity was left to its fate, propped up against a rock, and in a measure protected from the elements by the folds of a rough shawl which had been exclessly wrapped about it. It was about $9.45 o'clock that the beby's cries attracted the attention of James Kerrigan, who was waking up the tracks toward the Chestnut Rill station.

James Kerrizan, who was wakking up the tracks toward the Chestnut Mil station.

When he arrived at the station he notified Special Officer Young of the Newton police. A lantern was precured and both men proceeded down the track and following the sound of the cry, found the little one and carried it to the Newton almshouse. The baby was richly attired. Its outside garment was pretty cashmere cloak, elaborately embroidered. It was an exceedingly good looking infant, and apparantly a healthy one, for although nearly exhausted from lack: of nourishment when found, it soon ralled and is now happy, fat and contended even amid papers surroundings.

On the night when the baby was found a woman wes seen in the vicinity of the pumping station of Bosten water works who was a passenger in a Beacon street electric caz. She was an attractive looking woman, well dressed and of stykish figure and carriage. After leaving the car she acted strangely, and it was noticed that she had a busdle in her arms. The same woman returned later in an electric car, and has been since traces to Boston. She was without the bundle on the home lump Whether the strange woman can in any way beconnected with the case the future must decide. It is thought to be no ordinary case of abandonment.

THE ALLEN MOVEMENT,

The movement in favor of Hon. Chas. H. Allen of Lowell has made something of a disturbance and may interfere with Mr. Crapo's chances. When Speaker Barrett drew out it seemed that Mr. Crapo would be nominated without opposition, but it remains to be seen how much strength there is to the Allen more ment.

Every one realizes that a great mistake was made last year in not nominating Mr. Crapo, for it is believed that with him as the leader, the result would have been very different and it is hardly necessary to say that this fall is not a time when any mistakes can be made without danger of serious consequences.

Mr. Allen may be all that his friends claim, and he may be able to cope with Governor Russell on the stump and show himself the better man of the two, but he has not the advantage of Mr. Crapo's almost national reputation, and besides if Mr. Allen enters the field he will have to contend against many obstacles. Several would be candidates with-drew their names when they saw the tide setting so strongly towards Mr. Crapo, and it is not believed that they would take the nomination of a younger man very kindly. Some of them have very great influence in the state, and they might be inclined to think that the success of Mr. Allen would interfere with the plans formed for the disposal of the United States Senatorships. It is not probable that either of the present Senators will be renominated, as there is a widespread feeling that a change would not be disadvantageous to the interests of the state, and the man who is chosen governor this fall will have an important advantage in the contest for the Senatorship.

Mr. Crapo would fill this office more satisfactorily, probably, than any others who have been talked of, as his disposition and business training have disposed him to take a liberal view of public affairs, and besides there would not be the same opposition to be feared, as if some of the younger men who have been involved in factional contests, were to be a candidate. The same reasons also apply to his nomination for the governorship. Mr. Crapo has long been talked of as the ideal candidate, a man of irreproachable character, and one who would not stoop to any pulling and hauling to secure the nomination. The other plan has been tried, and now would seem to be a good time to allow the nomination to go to the man whom the people want, and let all manufactur-ing of booms go over to another year.

the Senatorship.

We have nothing to say against Mr. Allen, he may have all the ability and talent that his friends claim, and be better fitted for the position than any man who has been mentioned, but he is a young man yet, and can afford to wait. Last year showed that Massachusetts is not the solid Republican state of former years, and Governor Russell has certainly not lost any great number of followers during his term in office. It will be of great importance to secure the inde-pendent vote, and Mr. Crapo seems much more likely to gain this vote than any other candidate who has been mentioned.

THERE is a movement to crowd Mr. J. O Hayden, who has filled the office of county treasurer for six years, satisfactorily, off the track this fall, but it does not promise to be very successful. There can be nothing said against Mr. Hayden's honesty or competency to discharge the duties of the office, and the position is not one that should be given merely as a reward for party service. They have tried that system in Philadelphia with deplorable results, and when an honest treasurer is found he should be kept in office. Mr. Hayden is a very courtious gentleman, as all who have had business dealings with him have found, and the Republicans of Mid-dlesex county intend to keep him in ofare enough offices without financial responsibility to be fought over, and passed round year by year, but the office of treasurer should not be made a political football. Mr. Hayden's experience makes his service, more valu-uable to the county than any new man could possibly be, and he ought to be renominated without any trouble.

Tris good news for the farmers that the prices of wheat and other grains have taken a sudden rise—if the speculators do not pocket all the profits. The ukase of the Russian government forbidding the export of rye and wheat, is given as the cause of the rise in this country. While the United States. with its very abunthe United States, with its very abundant wheat crop of the present year may be able to supply any foreign demand the total amount of rye which it is thought available for export is only 5,000,-000 bushels, which will fall far short of the need. The price of rye in this country has risen in a few days from 60 cents to $1.12 per bushel. The United States, Russia and India are the three great grain experting countries, and the failure of the crop in Russia has a serious effect upon the grain markets of the

THE Pennsylvania Republicans got a near to free coinage as they dared, evidently, as they resolve that they favor bimetalism, and the purchase and coinage of all the silver produced from American mines. They had a fight over the endorsement of Blaine for the Presidency, and finally compromised with a mild endorsement of the President, and an enthusiastic endorsement of Blaine. The dishonesty in official life in that state finds recognition in the platform by the statement that Tweeds and Bardsleys are found in all parties, but the statement would have been more complete if it had had included the Delamaters and Quays.

MEMBERS of the Grand Army of the Republic are not given to fault finding relative to their treatment at Detroit at the recent Encampment, but it is leaking out that the contrast between the treatment of the veterans there and in Boston last year was very marked. tels and boarding houses seemed to think the chance of a lifetime had come, and they trebled and quadrupled the prices of entertainment. Even the two-cent newspapers took a rise that week and were sold to the veterans at five cents a copy.

Among prominent visitors to our reservoir and water works the past week have been Superintendents Richards of Atlanta, Ga., and Decker of Salina, Ks.; Presidents Hawes of the Fall River Water board, and Mather of the Harrisburg, Penn., water board, the entire water board of Lowell with the registrar, superintendent and city engineer. The new reservoir is attracting much favor-The able comment, and is also fulfilling the purposes for which it was designed, of furnishing water to the elevated portions of the city.

After this we may all be content to reside in Newton, Brookline may be rich, but what are riches without culture?

THE Boston Traveller is pursuing a very curious course in politics and it is now opposing Senator Towle of Brookline, who is seeking relection, and who would confer more honor upon the office than the office could confer upon him. The Senate this year was a very able body, and Mr. Towle was one of the ablest members. We do not believe that the voters of the second Norfolk district will be inclined to swap him for any un-

A Small Boy's Bereavements

A Small Boy's Bereavements.

Among the bright sayings of children the following, of a Newton youngster, may pass as good. This boy had a dog named Dave. Dave died. One day the boy was seen tapping vigorously on an apple tree in the yard. Presently he stopped and, placed his ear to the trunk of the tree and listening intently, was heard to ejaculate:

"Hello, Dod; how's Dave??

The same boy had also lost his grandmother. The other day his toy balloon got away and floated off into the air, whereupon he exclaimed:

"Well, Dod's got grandma, Dod's got Dave, Dod's got my balloon, and now I haven't got anything to play with.

Wanted His Letters.

Very strange is the adventure through which a postman named Bondon has just passed at Nimes. He had taken a registered letter to one Faure, a shoemaker, and was about to leave the house when the man closed the door, pulled a revolver out of his pocket, and rushing on Bondon threw him down and bound him securely. He then informed the terrified postman of his intention to retain him as a hostage until he had retain him as a hostage until he had received divers letters written to him by the president of the republic and the minister of justice in reply to his application for the restoration of 30,000 francs lost in a lawsuit.

A Telegraph Wire for Gossip. William Tripp runs a farm near Round

William Tripp runs a farm near Round Lake and raises produce, which he sells to the people living on the camp ground. His wife sells excellent milk, and the couple, who are past middle age, make a comfortable living. The young folks of the camp ground are fond of visiting the farm, where they drink milk and chat with Mrs. Tripp, who, through the medium of her private telegraph line, knows all the country gossip for miles around.

Last year the farmer, finding his even-ings heavy on his hands, bought a tele-graph instrument and ran a wire to the railroad station two miles away. From there he extended the line to a neighborthere he extended the into to a neignor-ing settlement and later connected with two farmhouses several miles below. Counterfeit Half Dollar.

A dangerous counterfeit fifty cent piece has been sprung upon the guileless public. The piece is a beauty, and shows great care and skill in its make up. It is one of the series of 1887 and has the clear ring of the genuine article. The main point of difference, however, lies in the thickness, which is a trifle more than in the genuine article. The figure than in the genuine article. The figure on one side is rather obscure, but is, at the same time, nearly perfect, although there is a slight depression in the shield.

—The fence around the City Hall lot has been removed and the appearance of the grounds greatly improved by the change. A plan has been suggested looking toward a wide walk on Washington street extending to the old "Village Hall" block. To carry out the project, it would be necessary for the city to purchase a three-foot strip from the Second Congregational Society. If the land can be procured the sidewalk could be widened from Cherry street to a point below the Peirce schoolhouse and the change would be very satisfactory to nedestrians, besides setting off the City Hall and adjacent buildings to better advantage. A neat granite curbing would be a finishing touch, separating the grass plats from the concrete.

THE DEATH OF CESAR.

In order not to mislead the reader I will say at once our hero has nothing but the name in common with the conqueror of Pharsalia. The Cæsar whose death am going to sing was, in life, an honest creature devoid of ambition, who never would have wept with jealousy on seeing the statue of Alexander. He led a pure and tranquil existence, fulfilled the mod-est duties confided to him and practiced in silence all the virtues compatible with his social position.

From father to son the ancestors of Cæsar had fathfully served the house of Aubainville that held in the colony of Louisiana a position like that of the proud seigneurs of Brittany before the Revolution. Like his ancestors Cæsar was loving, devoted, faithful. It would have been difficult to find a handsomer dog than Cæsar, for Cæsar was a dog. If he had been a man his eminent qualities must have won recognition long since and there would be no need for me to write his biography thus tardily.

His full-length portrait which adorns the dining-room of Aubainville plantation shows that he was tall, with a proudly-arched head set on massive shoulders; that he had a finely molded body and slender loins as became a strong but beautiful and graceful dog. His coat was white with brindle stripes like a tiger's; his muzzle was short, but his ears were long and silky, and without being an expert in canine physiology any one looking at this portrait may trace the noble breeds of bull dog and greyhound which produced Cæsar.

In the winter of 1814 Cæsar was three years old. On his neck he wore a simple copper ring, polished till it shone like fine gold, and on this ring hung a little medallion indicating that Cæsar belonged to Mile. Henriette Aubainville.

At this epoch the plantation of Aubain ville no longer wore the aspect of life and well-being that formerly impressed its guests in the good times when Louisiana still belonged to France. Situated three miles from New Orleans and accessible by water from the lower levee as well as by a fine road through a thickly wooded country the plantation served for a pleasure house to the noble Creoles of the city and the neighboring planters. There was perpetual carnival, the stream of guests constantly arriving twice outnumbered the rivulet of those who felt reluctantly compelled to take their leave. Then the gentry when they boasted of the profuse Southern hospitality never failed to point their remarks by a reference to our dear Monsieur Aubainville and his "Chateau."

Nature and man had united their ure house to the noble Creoles of the city failed to point their remarks by a reference to our dear Monsieur Aubainville and his "Chateaa."

Nature and man had united their efforts to change this state of things and to rob Aubainville of its wealth and popularity. The river had swept away the levee that formerly terminated the garden and after submerging vast rich fields now flowed within a stone's throw of the house. Men in the city and on the plantations now frowned when they heard the name of their former host pronounced. For M. Aubainville had chosen to take what the Creoles called the wrong side of a burning question. While the purchase of Louisiana by the United States was still under consideration, his arguments in its favor were heard with resignation because his auditors were persuaded that it never would be carried out.

But when the project became an accomplished fact, a storm of indignation broke over M. Aubainville's head that could scarcely have been more bitter had he been the sole agent of the sale. Old stories were dressed up to defame him; it was remembered that he had corresponded with Jefferson, that he had sent two of his sons to battle and die in the navy of the States against Tripoli and that his third and last son instead of remaining at home to add his cry to Louisiana's indignant protest, was at the North, evrolled in the ranks of an army of merchants.

It was true, indeed, that M. Aubainville the younger was not at home by the side of his daughter and his father. The old man and Heuriette lived quite alone in the ruinous old house protected only by Lapierre, a faithful servant who had refused to leave his mister, and by Cæsar that was the little girl's constant companion.

Henriette was a pretty child of thirteen vears, whose sweet face, because of the

that was the little girl's constant companion.

Henriette was a pretty child of thirteen years, whose sweet face, because of the misfortunes of her race, wore an expression of gentle melancholy. She tended her grandfather with loving care. In the morning when Aubainville awoke, the first face he saw was Henriette's and she even learned of the colored Aunty who cooked for this little family how to make some dainties, for which the old man had once expressed a liking, with her own childish hands. She read aloud to distract him, and when sad thoughts sent a cloud over her grandfather's forehead Henriette put herself at his knees and sang a gay chanson. M. Aubainville listened and the sadness at his heart dissipated little by little at the sound of the child's voice. He placed his two hands on Henriette's forehead and lifted with an absent gesture the shining bands of her blonde hair.

Later in the day M. Aubainville taught candons. She fear adoubt considerable and the sale of Henriette put herself at his knees and stage a gar chanson. M. And the high the high the head and the high th in the gravel at the foot of his suzeraine. Cresar loved M. Aubainville, but he idolized Henriette. At a gesture from her he would abandon a bone and if she had ordered it, he would, no doubt, have sighed a trenty of peace with a certain cot, entreuched on the ridges of the manison, against which he carried on a hereditary vendetta. At the end of the old park of Aubainville, sadly runned by the flood, there stood a little hermitage where Henriette was accustomed to spend the hours while her graudfather was sleeping or reading. To escort her to and from this hermitage was Cresar's proudest duty. As soon as he saw her turn her steps in that direction his countenance changed. A moment before he might have been racing wildly through the long, untrimmed grass, but he would moderate his excitement instantly and assume a grave manner, as if he relt the responsibility of his office. In fact, his protection was not to be undervalued; that firm jux, piercing eye and those long cruel teeth might well frighten off an assault of wolves.

One day Lapierre, the faithful servant of Aubainville, returned from New Orleans, fright painted on his face. It was said there that the lawless element of the city reinforced by renegade Spaniards and some of the hot-blooded French who preferred to consort with criminals rather than seem by silence to acquiesce and some of the not-blooded French who preferred to consort with criminals rather than seem by silence to acquiesce in the annexation, had begun a series of depredations on the peace of law-abiding citizens which had as many varied explanations as there were elements in the band. These men performed their deeds of terror at night and no one knew exactly who or what they were, or where they would burn and intimidate next. Mereover, the approach of the British under Peackenham had aroused them to a frenzy of mistaken patriotism, to speak only of the best affected portion of the terrorists whose ranks had been swollen by lightheaded Creoles, who declared they would prefer the domination of even "perfidious Albion" to that of the Yankees. The city lay trembling like a man who has taken poison and who yet has not the courage to die. There were riots in every street of the French quarter nightly and these seldom terminated otherwise than in the letting of blood or the burning of a building. Several of the conservative leaders of the popular sentiment in favor of annexation had been harrled by the rioters, their goods destroyed, their dwellings put to the torch, and themselves carried to the gates. But more than this Lapierre had to relate; not content with carrying on their infernal practices within the town, the leaders were said to advocate a descent upon the outlying plantations, and Aubainville, which lay so near, could hardly escape receiving a visit from them. M. Aubainville heard, this news like a Christian and an old soldier. But when he looked at Henriette his eyes suddenly filled with tears. She was so young, so beautiful, so good! At her birth a smiling future had seemed to open before her. Beside her cradle a tender mother and a noble father had sath and in hand, mapping out for their darling a brilliant and happy life. Alas, her mother was dead, her father's fate wrapped in uncertainty, and it was more than probable that of all her family only one, and he an old man. The aname of the mother of the was a

to save her life?"
M. Aubainville at first rejected all idea of flight. Too old to resist he wished at least to face danger in the home of his ancestors, but his son was eloquent. The face of Henriette, also, which begged permission for her to approach, did the bayou into the tangled cypress glade which concealed the river. Then she sat down on the threshold of the familiar building and gave up her spirit to revery. Cæsar lay down at her feet, his head resting on his paws with his eyes half closed to avoid a ray of the setting sun which played among his reddish eyelashes. The dog seemed half asleep.

All at once he rose and uttered a deep growl. With head erect and neck stretched forward he darted a flerce glance in the direction of the river. Henriette followed his eyes and saw a pirogue laden with men come stealing slowly around the bend.

She stood upon her trembling limbs, but fear at length gave her strength and she ran like the wind back to the house. Cæsar stopped an instant on the mound to launch a menacing growl across the water. It was answered by the voice of a bloodhound in the boat. Cæsar listened intently and seemed uncertain whether or not to respond. Then he turned and with lithe bounds he soon overtook his panting mistress.

At Aubainville, as in most old Southern houses built during the Spanish domination, there were concealed chambers and secret doors. Henriette preceded the marauders by a quarter of an hour which gave her time to conquer her grandfather's scruples. The old hero finally consented to hide himself in a secret chamber, after having taken his sword and hung around his neck a medal sent home by his son from Tripoli, in case they discovered his retreat. This remnant of the old regime would not like to die en neglige. As soon as he had seen the door made fast upon them, Cæsar lay down in front of the threshold.

Some minutes after, three desperadoes, a mulatto servant, and a man well known in the gambling-houses of New Orleans who was reputed to be a retired smuggler, presented themselves at the front door of the house. Lapierre, who had not been warned, opened it and was immediately mide prisoner.

"Mhere is your master?" demanded the smuggler. The sounded up the stair-case. The four men followed encouraging him.

"He'll find 'em," said the leader, 'he don't lose the scent. They can't get away."

As he spoke a death-like stillness fell upon the house. The bloodhound's bays were no longer heard. He had caught sight of Cæsar who now rose stealthily on his four feet. The two beasts glared for a moment face to face. Both were robust animals, full of ardor, strength and suppleness. The bloodhound showed his double row of white and pointed teeth, 'Set on! Set on! My beauty!" cried a voice from the stair.

The hound bounded forward. Cæsar sprang and caught him by the throat. The bloodhound shook himself convulsively for a second, then he uttered a smothered growl, leaped high pawing the air and fell down motionless.

Cæsar without another glance at his fallen enemy went and lay down again in his old place. The bloodhound was dead.

ville's son and six of his troop entered the chamber. In a turn of the hand the maranders were disarmed, bound and thrown into a corner. Henriette, laughing and crying, embracing her father, kissed her grandfather, and ran to the window to wave her thanks to Lapierre. "Now let us set out," said her father. The carriage stood ready at the end of the gravel walk. M. Aubainville mounted first. When Henriette stepped up she felt herself held back by her dress and looking around she saw Casar whose fading eyes piteously implored a farewell caress.

A trail of blood on the gravel marked his passage.

"Oh, my Casar! my Casar!" Henriette kn lt down and held to her breast the head of the faithful creature. Casar moved his tail joyously and tried to give a bark of happiness. "We have time to dress his wound and take him with us. Oh, say yes! papa, grandfather!"

Casar licked her hands, looked gratefully in her face as if he understood, then he stretched his full length on the gravel and died.

Two years after, Henriette and her falher returned to their old home and went at once to work to restore its ancient walls. But before any other thing was done for either comfort or adornment. Henriette caused to be painted from a sketch she drew, the portrait which hangs in the dining room at Aubainville, the portrait of Cessar.

PARK THEATRE—Neil Burgess, with his "County Fair" has determined to give all New England an opportunity of seeing this remarkable natural and hom like play during the coming season, as he boldly announces to the public that he intends to play "The County Fair" at the Park Theatre, Boston, for the entire theatrical season of 1891-92, commencing early in September. Every indication points to the success of Mr. Burgess' intention regarding the run of his play as its four years' continuous run in New York City makes it a foregone conclusion. "The County Fair" comes to Boston with not only the complete seenic, mechanical and electrical equipment used in the New York production, but has many new and elaborate changes for which the stage of the Park Theatre has been entirely rebuilt. It is also Mr. Burgess' intention to have five horses in the great race effect, running continuously in full view of the audience for three-quarters of a mile.

No More Pearls from Wisconsin.

No More Pearls from Wisconsin, which was at its height in numerous rivers a year ago, seems to have ended as speedily as it came. Pearls were found in the clams in many rivers, but none of any particular value was found except in Sugar and Pecatonica rivers in southern Wisconsin. Not only has the stock of pearls been exhausted, but the clams have been practically exterminated. No good pearls have been found for several months, nated. No good pearls have been found for several months,

It is the opinion of dealers that profitable pearling in Wisconsin rivers is practically ended for several generations at least, as there are few clams remaining in the rivers which produce pearls, and it will require many years for the clams to multiply sufficiently. Besides there is no knowing how many years are required to produce the pearls, even were the clams to become numerous again. There is no means of estimating the value of the pearls taken from Sugar and Pecatonica rivers while the exciteand Pecatonica rivers while the excitement lasted, though it would undoubtedly run far up into the thousands of dollars.

Pearls were sold in the market here for all sorts of prices, from a few shillings up to nearly $1,000. One firm in Milwaukee sold three to a New York dealer for $1,600, while hundreds of others brought prices ranging from $50 to $300, and some of the choicest were sold by New York dealers, it is said, for as high as $5,000 each. There is yet great demand for Wisconsin pearls, and their scarcity, it is believed, will tend greatly to increase their value. It is a greatly to increase their value. It is a pity that "the goose which laid the golden egg," or rather the clams which produced the pearls, should have been so ruthlessly exterminated. — Milwaukee Sentinel.

Fashions for Men.

The popular color for morning suits this season is brown. There are dozens of shades of that color. The russet browns and the dull browns, in which there is a slight mingling of gray, are the shades that go off best. Trousers have undergone some slight alterations as re-gards shape since last year. They follow the shape of a peg top somewhat, and are worn loose at the knees and tight over the boots. Stripe patterns are con-sidered better taste than checks. The freek coat is more fashionable

The frock coat is more fashionable than ever, and only in a few details does than ever, and only in a rew details does it differ from last season's shape. It is considered to look very elegant on tall men with good figures, but neither a very tall, thin man or a little, stout man ought to wear a frock coat. It makes the one look like a lamppost and the other literally all cost ought to wear a frock coat. It makes the one look like a lamppost and the other literally all coat.

I learned a thing or two about the mysteries of sartorial art in the course of a conversation with a leading tailor the other day. He said: "Judicious padding will hide a multitude of faults in a man's figure. We get a gaunt looking man sometimes, with sloping shoulders. He wishes to be made to look important. Well, we put as much padding as we can into both his waistcoat and coat, and give him an inch or an inch and a half artificial elevation in the shoulders."

The newest overcoats worn by turfmen are made exactly like a frock coat at the back. In front they are like the ordinary Chesterfield. I was shown a new material in a heather and gray mixture with a large check in dull red, called the Scots Guards plaid. It makes up well for race course suits. The Prince of Wales and Lord Lonsdale have both had suits of it.—Pall Mall Budget.

Figures of Two Big Railroads.

An interesting comparison was re-cently made of two of the greatest rail-road corporations in the world, one Eng-lish, the other American. The Pennsyl-vania system, regarded as one aggrega-tion, though it includes more than 100 tion, though it includes more than 100 minor corporations, represents 7,915 miles of railroad and a canal, a share and bonded capital of $700,000,000,000 gross earnings in 1890 of $133,000,000 and the movement in the same year of 137,000,000 tons of freight and 84,000,000 passengers.

The English corporation referred to—the London and Northwestern—has an authorized capital of $533,877,979 and 1,916 miles of road, on which the gross receipts for one year were $29,651,339.

The scheme of tunneling through the mountains first occurred to John Markle, who is to be president of the company. It will open an inexhaustible supply of coal and furnish employment to thousands of people for many years to come. It will also serve the double purpose of decisional the collegies in the reller draining all the collieries in the valley.

Plenty of Kentucky Snakes

The crop of rathesnakes in the surrounding knobs is the largest in the memory of the first settlers. Many with rattles high up in the teens have been killed, and some of enormous size. As the greatest numbers have been killed on the Casey side of the line, it is especially the Casey side of the line, it is especially lucky that no one has been bitten, for not a drop of snake medicine is procurable in all that 'country.—Stanford (Ky.)Interior Journal.

Dangerous Autumnal Colors

Beware of gorgeous red and yellow antumnal leaves and shrubs and climbautumnal leaves and shrubs and climb-ing plants which are not known to be harmless. Our two poisonous native plants display the most brilliant autum-nal colors of any species in our woods and byways.—Salem Gazette. Men's Underwear in England

An amount of luxury is now put into summer flannels which not so long ago would have been deemed fabulous. The would have been deemed fabulous. The greatest advances have been made in the intermixture of silk with the wood, either in toto or used for the colored striping upon the white woolen ground. The beauty of these goods has permitted the nightshirt to regain much of the ground taken from it by the extraordinary nonlarity which paiguage suits have ground taken from it by the extraordinary popularity which pajama suits have enjoyed of late years.

Swell dressers, or rather undressers, have quite abandoned the linen nightshirt in favor of either silk or flannel, at the present moment, giving the preference to such as I have named above. In underwear there is not much change except in that patterns and fabrics are very quiet. Little silk is being shown, because there are so few Americans here to buy it, Englishmen going in much more for light gray "natural wools."

The English system of making drawers is somewhat more elaborate than

The idea of a tight abdominal bandage comes, like pajamas, sashes and twenty other specialties, from England's hot exotic possessions. Returning colonists bring a good idea home with them and it speedily becomes the rage for hot weather wear.—London Cor. Clothier and Furnisher. ers is somewhat more elaborate than

The Trout Caught the Diamond.

The Trout Caught the Diamond.
This is the way the latest fish story is told hereabouts: Joseph S. Frey and William Bercaw were trout fishing up in Monroe county on Saturday. While forcing his way through a thick clump of bushes overhanging the stream Bercaw saw a good sized trout dart out from a bank of the creek and pass directly beneath him. Working his way to a secluded nook a few feet above, the anxious angler cast his fly with such skill that in a few seconds he caught and safely landed a speckled beauty about skill that in a few seconds he caught and safely landed a speckled beauty about ten inches in length. He made a second effort, but could get no more trout there. Well, the fishermen continued on their way until their sport had ended and they seated themselves to clean their fish, of which, of course, they had a fine lot. On opening one of the trout the fish was found to contain a diamond shirt stud. This caused Bercaw to look for his diamond, when it was found to be missing. Then it flashed to the fisherman's mind how fortunate he had been—that in passing through the brush his diamond had been forced from his shirt front; the been forced from his shirt front; the trout he had seen dart in front of him trout he had seen dart in front of him had swallowed the jewel, and then he had succeeded in capturing the fish.

To a reporter who inquired of Mr. Bercaw concerning the truthfulness of the story, the latter declared it to be a feet in the first in the fact in every particular.—Easton (Pa.)

Forty Years a Recluse.

F. F. Lobb, brother of D. S. Lardner, residing at Piseco lake, in the Adirondacks, is expected to live but a short time. He has been a hunter and trapper for over forty years and now has consumption, although he did not gothere for health and was not aware of any predisposition to nulmonary trongers. any predisposition to pulmonary trou-bles.

Mr. Lobb was ambitious as a musician, but lost his hearing, spoiling his musical future, and in his disappointment he wentforty miles into the woods, built him a cabin by Piseco lake and took up the life of a hunter and trapper. He was there twenty-five years before Mr. Lardner knew where he was. Since that time Mr. Lardner has visited him, and he was here several years ago and spent several months, and was here again more recently. His recluse life was remunerative and his furs were sold at the settlements. Mr. Lobb was ambitious as a musi at the settlements.

During the progress of affairs at the lake, which has now become a popular resort, Mr. Lobb built him a comfortable home, and when O. B. Ives was at the lake he formed a very pleasant acquaintance with him.—New Britain (Conn.) Herald.

In the greatest engineering feat in the history of anthractic coal mining is about to begin. It is the commencement of what will be known as the Jeddo tunnel, with will be driven for the purpose of draining the flooded mines of Jeddo and Harleigh. It will be constructed from Butler Valley, Pa., to the bottom of Ebervade mammoth vein, a distance of three miles, through solid rock, and will be eight feet square in the clear.

Two Moons in the Washington Sky. About 1 o'clock one morning recently in the northwestern sky. The moon was about 20 degs. above the horizon, and the air was so surcharged with moisture that a halo, with an apparent diameter of eighty feet, was formed. In some parts this halo was rather indistinct, but on the right 'hand of the moon, as one point gradually increased in brilliancy until there was a perfect mirage of the moon. The phenomenon continued for several minutes and then faded away. An observer thought that the best designation of it would be 'moon dog," as it resembled the phenomenon which is produced sometimes by the atmosphere and the sun, with the exception that the sun has annually four "dogs."—Washington resembled the phenomenon which is produced sometimes by the atmosphere and the sun, with the exception that the sun has annually four "dogs."—Washington

—A five weeks old male infant was found midway between the Chestnut Hill and Reservoir stations last Friday night by Special Officer Young. A man who is employed on his estate by Dr. West was coming up the railroad toward his home when he heard a child cry. He found Officer Young, and telling him what he heard the latter procured a lantern and started down the track to investigate toward the Boston pumping station. He heard an infant cry and soon found a child with the aid of the lantern, lying behind a stone at the side of the embankment. It was a little boy about five weeks old and had evidently been left there but a short time. Officer Young took the child to the Chestnut Hill station and boarded the 10.39 train for Newton Centre, where the child was conveyed to the almshouse. The engineer of this train says he saw a well dressed man standing near the track at about the place where the infant was found on this trip out, but thought nothing of it until he learned of the discovery by Officer Young. The child was very well dressed and care seemed to have been taken to protect it from the night air as its arms were taken out of the coat sleeves and folded across the breast, and the feet and limbs were carefully wrapped up. The child is a beautiful little thing with pretty features and black hair and eyes.

—One of the most interesting historic homes of Kennebunkport is that known as the Clark mansion. It was built in 1812 by a Mr. Lord, to give employment to the returned soldiers whose enforced idleness was resulting in grave demoralization. It was built with great care and slowly, to give the workmen, who were employed by the day, every opportunity. A spiral staircase occupies the centre of the house from cellar to lookout. Down its entire length one of the family relates that she used to slide in her childhood, greatly to the terror of her elders. The house is famous for its hospitalities, dispensed by the present owner, Mr. C. P. Clark, President of the New York, New Haven and Hartford railroad. His daughter's famous wedding occurred here a few years since.

It is Good Work to Give Health.

The only remedy for blood disorders is one that will expel the germs of disease, and make the blood pure and rich. That is the best effected by Dr. David Rennedy's Favorite Remedy, of Rondout N. Y., a medicine of great value in the treatment of all blood disorders and diseases of the Kidneys. It tones the system and helps to do good work.

—The Baptist church was the scene of a pleasant gathering Monday evening, when a reception was given Rev, George W. Holman and Mrs. Holman. He has been pastor of the church for nearly three years, but has within a few weeks removed his residence here, and this was hailed as a most fitting occasion for his parishioners to tender him and his family some public recognition of their pleasure at having them as residents among them. Rev. Mr. Holman and Mrs. Holman received in the vestry ilor persons being present, and after mutual congratulations the company adjourned upstants, where the following interesting properties of the propert

—The people of Newton Upper Falls have had quite a sensation this week. Miss Lucy Holmes, a young miss of 17 years is the prominent figure in the case. According to Miss Holmes' story she was assaulted Monday afternoon while picking berries in Pierce's woods. She was accompanied in the berry picking excursion by the Peterson sisters, aged 12 and 14 respectively. Miss Holmes says that she cut some branches laden with berries and was sitting on a rock eating them when a man approached from behind. He snatched her scissors and cut off her long braid of black hair, making his escape immediately. She says she screamed and became unconscious and the Peterson girls called for assistance. Officer Moulton and others came and carried her to the house of Mrs. Harris, where she remained apparently unconscious for an hour and a half. Dr. Eben Thompson was called as soon as she was taken home and from her manner thought she might be badly hurt as she said it hurt her to raise one arm, but an examination revealed only a slight bruise near her shoulder. She described her assaillant as a short, thick set man, about 45 years of age, gray mustache, and attired in a gray suit and straw hat. The police were at once notified to look out for a man of this description and Officers Purcell and Leonard were detailed to investigate the case. The sensational stories published in the penny dailies of Boston, especially the morning one, anused everyone here from their absurd exaggerations, which were false in almost every particular, especially the statement about the 'criminal assault.' The reporters of the other papers took the twithe was cut of the yat ready and the particular was tucked under a rock and covered with leaves. The story that Miss Holmes 'braid of raven tresses was cut off by a tramp, is not now believed, and the opinion is general that the girl cut it off herself. As to Rats.—Concerning the proposition to employ women as sailors on English mercantile vessels the Paris edition of the Herald says.—There are the rats with which every ship is invested. Does any one imagine that women will sleep in a forecastle where rats will nightly steal their hairpins? The proposal of manning our steamers with seawomen is at first sight an attractive one, but it is to be feared that it is not practicable."—N. Y. Herald.

Recitations don't count in Philadelphia. A poor but honest, yet highly inebriated sad sea dog repeated this gem:—A sailor who don't like his grog. Is a blooming son of a yellow dog But the sailor who loves too well nis grog, Is a blasted son of a blooming hog. The grim judge before whom he appeared shortly after this effusion was not appreciative and held him in $5000 bail for his appearance. The judge had evidently heard some public readers before.—Boston Record.

—Mr. Harry Flinn has returned from a two week's vacation spent in New Hampshite. He was in Hanover upon the occasion of the capture of Alny and an eyewitaces of the exciting scenes of that day. He says that it was hard to secure volunteers willing to enter the barn and that 1470 persons out of 150 preferred to remain outside. The cuts of the barn and surroundings, printed in the Boston Herald, he says were very accurate and realistic.

—The Boston News sent a special correspondent to this city last Fraday evening to obtain the particulars of the Italian sewer laborers demonstration which occurred the aftermoon previous. The scribe accosted an officer at the depot in pursuit of fecis and discovered that he was about 24 hours too late. He told the officer that the first intimation the News had of the affair was obtained by reading the accounts in the other Boston papers Friday morning.

—Mr. Daniel E. Snow has been chosen explore of the Teenont Various Benk of in the other Boston papers Friday morning.

—Mr. Daniel E. Snow has been chosen cashier of the Tremont National Bank of Boston, to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Amos T. Frothingham. Mr. Snow has filled the office of assistant cashier of this bank for the past sixteen years, and previous to that he had filled the office of discount and collection clerk, book-keeper, and paying teller. The Tremont bank evidently believes in rewarding faithful services, and the new honor paid to Mr. Snow is one that is well deserved.

—Magee of New York, Leavitt of Newton and McCusker of Lowell, who are natched to swim a mile for the American championship and a $750 stake Sext. 12, have posted their final deposits or $100 states. The three nations are training hard for the event, which will be one of the most exciting of its kind ever see a in this country. There is no question that the men are three of the best in this country, and the winner will seek a contest with Joey Nutal, the English champion.

—Col. Charles of Fitch residing on No-order from the treasury department for a reduction at this port, Mr. Fitch is not only one of the most opoular men in the customs service, but also one of the most efficient. He has been in the department a number of years, and is thoroughly competent.

Death of Thomas J. Daly.

Thomas J. Daly, son of Edmond and Margaret Daly, died at his home, 22
Chestnut street, Newton Upper Falls, Monday evening. Death resulted from blood poisoning, caused by a carbuncle.
Deceased was 25 years of age. He was educated in the Newton schools, was graduated from the Newton High school and successfully passed his examinations for Harvard University. He, however, eutered Boston College, from which ineutered Boston College, from which in-stitution he obtained the degree of A. B. Following his graduation from Boston College, he engaged for a short time in newspaper work, and was at one time

College, he engaged for a short time in newspaper work, and was at one time connected with the reportorial staff of the Boston Herald.

Less than three years ago he entered St. John's Catholic Seminary, Brighton, to study for the priesthood. Leaster, after completing two years study in that institution, he received clerical tonsure, afterward continuing in his final studies until his last sickness. He was a painstaking student, and had won the reputation or being one of the most pious and learned students in St. John's Seminary. Personally he was affable, with liberal views and charming manners. He had a wide circle of friends and was respected and esteemed by all who knew him.

He suffered greatly during his illness but was patient and cheerful as he had always been under adversity. He spoke of his chosen work into which he had entered with a full knowledge of the responsibilities of God's ministry. He dwelt especially upon his student days speaking lovingly of his teachers and their kind hearted interest in him, expressing his sincere gratitude and appreciation of Mr. E. H. Cutler, the former head master of the Newton High school, Rev. Fr. Ross of Boston College and Rev. Fr. Rex of St. John's Seminary. Speaking of the deceased a friend said: "For one of his age he was well posted on the questions of the day. He was a most interesting companion, possessing a fund of general information. He conversed fluently in French and Spanish, was a well grounded English student and was well up in Latin and Greek. He entered upon the studies for the priesthood after mature deliberation and prepared himself in the best possible manner for his chosen work. Had he lived he would have made his mark.

The knowledge that his young life was nearly run came to him in the closing days of his illness. He looked calmly upon the resignation of his earthly work, called for his confessor and received the last sacraments.

"Poor Tom seemed fated from the beginning of his sickness, his constitution oeing unable to bear the malignant disea ceived the last sacraments.

"Poor Tom seemed fated from the beginning of his sickness, his constitution oeing unable to bear the malignant disease that carried him away. He bore his last sickness with courage and found consolation in Christ and the brighter thoughts of the hereafter."

The funeral took place from St. Mary's church, Wednesday morning. The church was filled to overflowing with friends and relatives of the deceased, and a large delegation numbering nearly 1() priests and students, from the seminary were present.

At 10 o'clock the casket, of plain black broadcloth, with silver mountings, was borne from his late residence on Chestnut street to the church, by the palbearers, Messrs. J. M. Brien, J. W. Mo-Laughlin, Bernard Sheriden, Francis J. Kearney, Thomas Donovan, George H. Cox, John S. Lester and William H. Hopkins.

Arriving at the church entrance the casket was received by eight seminarians, who bore the remains up the main aisle to a resting place in front of the altar.

A solemn high mass of requiem was celebrated by Rev. Fr. Dolan of the Church of Our Lady, assisted by Rev. Fr. Rex, president of St. John's seminary. Music was rendered by the choir.

The eulogy was delivered by Rev. Fr. Rex, president of St. John's seminary. Music was rendered by the choir.

Rev. Fr. McKenna of Kentucky, of the Benedictine order of monks, was among the prominent priests who attended the service.

The remains were conveyed to St. Mary's cemetery in Needham, a large number of friends of the deceased accompanying the body to the grave.

A Newton Institution. The sixth semi-annual report of the directors of the Newton Co-operative Bank is in the hands of the printer, and will be distributed to the shareholders at the next monthly meeting, Tuesday, September 1st.

The report will prove a most gratifying one to the shareholders of the bank. A dividend at the rate of six per cent, per annum has been declared and added to the value of the shares. The real estate loans have been increased until they now the value of the shares. The real estate loans have been increased until they now total nearly $110,000. The surplus and guaranty funds have been substantially added to. The furniture and fixture account has been entirely written off, and taken altogether, the three years of the bank's life have demonstrated that it has served a useful purpose in this community.

A new series of shares, limited in number, dating September, will be sold during the month, and to such of our readers as are not already shareholders, who desire an absolutely safe six percent, investment, for from one to twenty-five dollars monthly savings, the opportunity is offered for subscriptions at the bank in Newtonville.

The directors of the bank, who are among our most substantial citizens, are entitled to the thanks of the shareholders, for their labors on behalf of the institution, which labors are entirely gratuitious, no salary being paid excepting to the secretary, and that a very moderate one.

A historical table is doing service in the waiting room of the Philadelphia, Wilmington and Baltimore railroad station in Wilmington. It is the table on which the body of President Lincoln rested while being conveyed to Springfield, Ill., for burial. The table attracts little attention, very few people using the depot being familiar with its history.—Wilmington, Del., News.

Summer Doings at Cottage City.

Cottage City, Mass., Aug. 20th, '91. e season of '91 at New England's far-famed summer resort, is undoubted ly a success. Once more has that capricious personage, popular favor, shown its appreciation of the many attractions of Cottage City by thronging its streets with a restless, ever-changing tide, and everybody seems happy. For a time, however, it looked as if the verdict would be given the other way, for, dur-ing the first part of July, the town presented a gloomy, deserted appearance, quite unnatural for that time of year, owing doubtless to the cold, wet weather which had been so prevalent by spells on the mainland. It is remarkable, by the way, how forlorn the little city can look when deprived of its usual summer patronage, for being a regularly incor-porated town it has a population and a life of its own, and would seem on that account to be independent of the temporary presence of the outside world.

One unfortunate thing in connection with the present season has been the crowding together of the principal attractions, religious and social, within the compass of a single week, so that regular and transient visitors have been treated to the unheard of program of two campmeetings, a G A. R. rendezvous, a monument dedication, and bicycle parades all at the same time. Who of the fathers of Martha's Vineyard's his-toric camp-meeting ever dreamed of such a possibility as the adjournment of such a possibility as the adjournment of the regular public services at the stand in order that the congregation might attend the dedication of a soldiers' monument? Not that your correspondent would deprecate in the slightest degree the cultivation of patriotism on the part of all who share in the blessings of our loved land; yet there surely is a time for everything, and a place for everything as well, and due consultation and concession ought to have avoided the necessity for such a crowding of events. In regard to the occurrence of the two campmeetings at the same time, it is probable that that will be avoided in the future, as it resulted this season in the depleting of both congregations and the producing of general dissatisfaction. I hear, indeed, that negotiations have already been made looking to a better arrangement in the future. The readers of the GRAPHIC have probably seen detailed reports of the meetings in the daily papers, so that such would be superfluous at the present time. While the weather has been generally

Mr. Lowell stood so near many of the younger men of the country that they find it hard to speak of him dispassionately. So stainless a life, so inspir-ing a mind, so compelling a personality, we:e his that he seemed to share the permanence of a type or an ideal Those who remember his prime and those who knew the noble maturity of his age could not associate decline with him; as for death, that seems a thing incredible. His abounding vitality, his resolute and powerful grasp of life, his depth and range of nature, were unmistakable evidences of greatness; which is a quality of nature and of life, even more than the source of great works. Nature has done more for Mr. Lowell than for any other of the New England group of writers. His working moods were often fitful, and his work is uneven, but there is more impulse in it, more color and fire, more spontaneity, more rich human feeling, than in that of any of the men with whom he was most intimately associated. So fertile was his mind, so strong his personality, so rich the tides of thought and feeling that registered their ebb and flow in his talk and work, that, in spite of all he has done, he seemed never to realize his possibilities; there was always in him a thought deepe than he expressed, a life profounder than that he disclosed. This is true only of men of real greatness; such men are always richer and ampler than their work. To Mr. Lowell belongs the supreme control and super correspondent to the control of t distinction of having written the only great poetry yet produced on this con-tinent, the "Commemoration Ode;" a thousand arguments. His love of country was so great that he could not acquiesce in or remain indifferent to the things which degrade our public life. He abhorred the spoils system as every highminded American must; and he abhorred every man who uses the arts of the demagogue, the power of the machine, or the corrupt instrumentalities of "Practical spoilites." He saw that such men defile that ideal of republicanism which we ought to set as a beacon before the world.

Now that the lyre is silent, and the voice hushed, and the gracious presence vanished from the ways of men, this is our first thought of him: that he was a true American, who loved his country beyond praise or blame, and honored her with life and art. He helped to clear the vision, to erase the stain, to bring nearer that spiritual America for which we wait. In his own person he disproved the reproach that America produces only average men; that it is the paradise of the commonplace. For he was in all things the superior man; distinction marked his life, his thought, his spirit, and his work. No one knew his people better, wene honored them more by appealing to what was best in them, none loved them with a nobler loyalty to tuth. He illustrated that lofty patriotism which loves one's country not as against the world, but as one with the world, but as one with the world, but as one with the world; the patriotism which in honoring its own honors humanity, and in seeking the best for its own compasses all mankind with its deep-hearted beneficence.

"Be proud! for she is saved, and all have helped to save! She that lifts up the manhood of the poor, She of the open soul and open door, With room about her hearth for all mankind!"

Deafness Can't Be Cured

Deafaess Can't Be Cured by local applications, rs they can not reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to zure Deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafaess is caused by an inflam d condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound of imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroved forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by Catarrh) that we can not cure by taking Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

Of the Bank of Waverly, Iowa says: Sulphur Bitters saved my life. For ten years I suifered from Catarrh and Liver Complaint; I lost forty-five pounds and was growing worse rapidly. I had lost all faith in medicine, but hearing your bitters so well recommended, I gave them a trial. Six bottles cured me.—Smith P. Hunt, Waverley, Iowa.

I have had catarrh for twenty years, and used all kinds of remedies without relief. Mr. Smith, druggist, of Little Falls, recommended Ely's Cream Balm. The effect of the first application was magical, it aliayed the inflammation and the next morning my head was as clear as a bell. I am convinced its use will effect a permanent cure. It is soothing and pleasant, and I strongly urge its use by all sufferers.—Geo. Terry, Little Falls, N. Y.

Perhaps no other branch of the healing art" has made more rapid strides during the last fifty years than dentistry. Many a middle aged man can recollect the horror he experienced when as a lad he was dragged to the office wherein resided a strong, muscular ogre, whose aim in life it was to terrify the rest of the community by deciding that "this root must come out," or that "snag has got to be pulled." ### The Crops and the Tariff.

o the Editor of the Post:-Sir-The New York Tribune fairly surpassed itself yesterday in an article by its vacation editor on free trade heresies. First, it got out its phonographic doll, known in the office as "Free Trader," and had a good deal of fun making it say some true and some talse things and say some true and some rase tings and knocking it down, winding it up with a "gag" on poor old McKinley, by the doll, who said that his luck was wonderful. Then the Tribune took up the present boom for American farm products, as boom for American farm products, as follows:

"It is not altogether lucky or merely fortunate that this country had great crops of almost every staple just when foreign industries are most depressed. The expansion of production at this time is not entirely a matter of luck. One principal object of the new tariff was to afford better protection to agriculture. It contained new duties for the express purpose of enabling American farmers to secure the home market more fully. At the same time it gave them assurance of expansion of manufactures and establishment of new industries, creating a far greater home demand for their products. Early last fall, as soon as the new tariff went into effect, these results were perceived. American farmers, thus encouraged, increased their production in every direction, and so rapidly that they might have found reason to regret it if unusual toreign demands had not arisen. The encouragement of industry here was the legitimate fruit of a tariff intended for that purpose.

You see the American farmer could fruit of a tariff intended for that purpers.

You see the American farmer could undersell his competitors in the European market; that much was certain; but the danger was that the Europeans might undersell him in the American market. So the new tariff arranged it so that he should be sure of the American market, and this so encouraged the simple minded, rustic that he went and planted and had the right amount of rain and things, and got such a lot of crops that even the home market is not enough, and, he is saved from ruin only by the big demand of the European market. But if it were not for that tariff, it is terrible to think how those subtle Europeans might just let him have their market and come over here and take his, and then where would be be?

Then, as a wind-up, the suggestion is made that when foreigners can "no longer" pay gold for our products they could do it by selling American securities, so that Americans should own $200,000,000 in a year more of America." What is to be done when they have sold all they hold is not stated; but it will be pretty good fun on the stock exchange while it lasts, and such a help to American holders of American securities to have those foreigners selling out and letting them have things their own way. Then how pleased the South and West would be to have not only no more British capital pourfug in and developing their industries and booming their real estate, but that what has gone in should start and sell out at the gentle rate of $200,000,000 a year and let them have things their own way.

Boston, Aug. 23. own way. Boston, Aug. 23.

Mckinley and the Tariff. [Springfield Republican.]

His remarks on the tariff do not place him in any different light. Last year he held the position that the purpose of the new act was to diminish imports and give American producers a large share of the home market. Now he points to a larger foreign trade as a result of the larger foreign trade as a result of the law. Then he stated, as chairman of the ways and means committee, that the higher duties were to bring higher prices, but he now labors through half a column to show that the law has really reduced prices. Instead of pointing out how generally duties have been increased and "protection" accorded, he now seeks to show how very small and limited are the advances of taxes in the law and how numerous and extended are the reductions. One would conclude from this speech that the only articles subjected to an increase of duty were champagues and luxuries and the agricultural products of his Ohio auditors—in the one case designed to tax consumers all around and in the other to raise prices to producers and lower them to consumers. He also devotes a few words to faint praise of the reciprocity amendment, which at the time he was much opposed to.

False Logic.

[Providence Journal.]
If Major McKinley's opening speech is to be taken as the key-note of his cam-paign, it seems that he is to dismiss the matter of low prices for Ohio wool with matter of low prices for Ohio wool with the cavalier remark that "if the duty on wool is the cause of depressed prices then the tariff cannot be a tax." Now this may be a very "smart" thing to say, but the smile that it will provoke in any quarter can be but vacuous and evanescent. The duty on wool, eyen though it has been followed by lower prices for the domestic product is still a tax on those who have to buy foreign wool and on all people who wear woollen clothing; and to tell the Ohio farmer that the wool duty is not a tax would, even if it were true, not console him for the failure of that duty to put the additional money in his pocket which was promised him.

One of the curiosities of the new tariff is noted by the American Wool tariff is noted by the American Wool Reporter, says the Springfield Republican. If Canadian wool is washed on the sheep's back and then shorn the duty on importation into the United States is 12 cents a pound. But the water in Canada at shearing time is so cold that it is cruel to wash the sheep; and if the wool is washed after shearing, although no cleaner than by the other method, it is subject to a duty of 30 cents a pound, or over 100 per cent. No wonder the manufacturers turn to rags and shoddy.

HOLIS STREET THEATRE.
Mr. James T. Powers and company, in a "Straight Tip." have been rehearsing at the Holis Street Theatre under the direction of Mr. Julian Mitchell. A number of changes are to be made in the comedy, and in its revised shape it will be almost a new performance. Mr. Powers during his recent visit to Europe, secured a quantity of fresh material, and Mr. McNally has introduced much that is new into his favorite work. The cast of a "Straight Tip" will be practically the same as that of last season. All of the principal people have been retained, including, in addition to Mr. Powers, Peter F. Daily, John Sparks, Richard Gorman, the Clipper quartet, and Misses Emma Hanley and Delia Stacy. The new members of the company are Misses Mary Bird, Dora Webb, Leona Amrose and Rose Figman. Everything will be new in the way of music and dances. The music will be under the direction of Mr. Louis Miller. "A Straight Tip" will open its season next Thursday in Worcester and return to Boston on the following Monday, Aug. 31, to inaugurate the regular season of the Hollis Street Thoatre. Last year Mr. Powers and "A Straight Tip" were one of the principal successes of the entire theatricalseason. No comedian and no farce comedy ever made such a brilliant record in such a short time. The piece itself is in good shape, and the members of the company are all more than ambitious to excel in their several parts. The sale of seats commenced this week.

BOSTON THEATE.

BOSTON THEATRE.

Large audiences have attended the presentation of "Tuxedo" at the Boston Theatre this week. It proved as great a success in Boston as in other cities where it has been seen. The comedy in the piece is bright and clear and the minstrel second act is a most interesting and amusing feature. The standard melodrama "After Dark," will be presented at the Boston Theatre for a season of one week, comencing Monday evening, August 31st, by the excellent dramatic company especially organized and managed by Mr. W. A. Brady. Denman Thompson begins his engagement in "The Old Homestead" on Labor day, Sept. S. It will be a grand production with many new and realistic features.

GRAND OFERA HOUSE.

Sept. S. It will be a grand production with many new and realistic features.

GRAND OPEIA HOUSE.

Owing to the phenominal success of "Kit" last season Mr. Chanfrau has decided to produce that play this year 'Kit" will be entirely revised, and in its new shape will be presented at the Grand Opera House commencing Monday evening Aug. 31. The principal old special features will be retained, and new once introduced in order to comply with the necessities of more modern desires. A great deal of attention has been given the mounting, and the musical features introduced cannot fail to meet with approbation. The "Judge and Major" will be in the hands of two competent comedians. Tom Freeman, who has been engaged for the Dutch women, will introduce his unique German songs and dances. George Liseam, the topical vocalist, has been engaged for the part of Jerry Sleeper, the tough, and Fred Palmer, a negro comedian of considerable reputation, for the part of Julius.

negro comedian of considerable reputation, for the part of Julius.

TREMONT THEATHE.

On Monday evening next, August 31st, at the Tremont Theatre, Mr. F. Marion, will make his initial bow, as a star before a boston audience presenting his original farce comedy entitled "Mr. Macaroni." Mr. Marion is well known not alone here but all over the country as a character actor and Italian dialectician of rare merit. Mr. Marion's part in the new play will permit a display of his great versatility, making several distinct character changes. The members of the company engaged include Mr. Otis Harland of Razzle Dazzle fame: Frank Opperman, a character actor of large experience; James Manning and Joseph Davis of celebrated Silver Bel quartet, Donald Balfe, basso; George Preston. tenor, late of the Agnes Huntington Opera Company; Mr. Charles J. Clark, late with Hoyt and Thomas; Joseph Smith, son of the great Maitre de Ballet, George H. Smith. Mr. Smith claims his son to be the greatest male premier ever seen in this country. Among the ladies are Miss Near Vernon, Lillian Harper, soubrette; Katherine Ormonde, contralto; Fanny Hart, Rhea and Leab Starr, etc. The costuming of the play will be elaborate, the music entirely new and of a bright and catchy nature. The general care with which the production will be made leaves little doubt that Ludlow's players and "Mr. Macaroni" will be a success. Seats can now be obtained at the box office.

State Politics.

It may be accepted as undeniable that Mr. Allen would never have been a candidate had the Advertiser not pledged its support to Mr. Crapo, and that the veteran leaders who are now promoting

Its support to Mr. Crapo, and that the vectran leaders who are now promoting Mr. Allen's candidacy would have been strenuous in their efforts to procure the nomination of Mr. Crapo. These considerations cannot fail to impress thoughtful Republicans who are solicitious for success and who. deplore the manifest discord which exists and which will not improve the chances of defeating Gov. Russell.—[Boston Beacon.]

The Boston Journal is now for Allen or Crapo, or Crapo or Allen and it says: For a dog-day evening of the most pronounced type, it must be confessed that the Lawrence Republicans developed a good deal of enthusiasm for the candidacy of Mr. Allen. Such meetings, whatever-candidates they may favor, are a good symptom of an active interest in the approaching campaign. They bespeak a determination to make the campaign a hustling one. We believe there is a resolute purpose among Massachusetts Republicans to redeem the State this fall.

The Boston Journal is of the comfortable opinion that "the Quay scheme" of indicating "intense antipathy to President Harrison" in the Pennsylvania convention "was defeated." But when one man approaches another on the street with his fists doubled up and aimed straight at the latter's eyes it can hardly be said that he has failed to make known the state of his feelings toward the person in question even though, just before the blow is given, his friends pull him back or his own second thought stays his hand.—Providence Journal.

There might be a measure of force in stays his hand.—Providence Journal.

There might be a measure of force in the position of the Allen men were it not for the fact that the standing of their candidate with the people cannot be compared with that of Mr. Crapo. The fact that Mr. Crapo has been defeated in previous conventions is no evidence of his weakness as a candidate today, for as everybody knows the principal reason for his defeat was his refusal to descend to the methods by which less scrupplous politicians bring themselves to the front.—New Bedford Evening Journal.

The dignified attitude of Mr. Crapo in

The dignified attitude of Mr. Crapo in relation to the gubernatorial nomination seems to invite more energetic, if less self-respecting political rivals to enter the field against him. It has been so in former years, and the experience seems likely to be repeated once more. It is not thought that Willian E Barrett will sit quietly and see the Allen procession pass by without attempting to turn it off into a side street.—Gardner News.

There is a suspicious silence on the part of newspapers all over the commonwealth concerning our proposition that a colored man be given a place on the state ticket this fall. Now or never, gentlemen. We have been promising the black man how much we mean to do for him, now let us fulfil our promise. Why not nominate a colored man for auditor?—Have:hill Gazette.

It is hardly safe to count on Waltham's sending to the State convention a solid delegation for Allen. Interested parties may represent it that way, but "the wish is father to the thought." Waltham politics are often quite uncertain. Our delegates need to remember one thirg and that thing is paramount to the candidacy of any individual—the party must move harmoniously and victoriously next November. Individual ambitions must give way to the general good.—Waltham Free Press.

Settling an Estate.

Once there was a lawyer who closed up an estate case, but he died many years ago. He was a young man. He had studied law in his father's office and his father finally retired and gave up the business to him. One day, less than a week after the old gentleman had retired the young man came home and proudly said:—

"Father, you know that old Gilpin estate case that you have been trying for years and years to settle."

"Yes," answered the father with a suggestion of a smile.

"Well, it didn't take me two days to settle it after I got at it."

"What" shouted the old lawyer, You have settled the Gilpin estate?"

"Yes, and it was as easy as rolling off a log."

"Well, you infernal idiot, you! Why."

"Yes; and it was as easy as rolling on a log."

Old Church Records Recovered.

Ex-Governor Charles H. Bell has restored to the First Congregational church of Exeter, N. H., a valuable record book, discovered by him in the shop of a local dealer in antiquities. It is a small mandealer in antiquities. It is a small manuscript volume containing a record of the 727 baptisms administered by the Rev. Woodbridge Odlin between Sept. 28, 1743, and Oct. 30, 1763. The book also contains a few miscellaneous items, of which this is the most important: "Nov'r 18, 1755. About four o'clock in ye morning there was a smart shocke of an earthquake, which was followed with several smaller shockes, to the great surprise of many. God grant yt ye impressions yt were made upon ye minde of many might be abiding."

The handwriting is handsome and very legible, and the book is remarkably well preserved. It fills an important gap

The farm of John H. Miller, who lives eighteen miles southeast of Sedalia, Mo., is alowly being swallowed up in what seems to be a huge river flowing beneath the surface of the earth. The phenomenon was observed first Saturday, when Mr. Miller's family heard a rumbling noise in the orchard. Investigation revealed a hole in the ground about six feet in diameter and several feet deep, with water at the bottom. The rumblings continued, and the hole has been constantly enlarging since that time.

F. P. Clayton visited the spot and made a thorough investigation of what he terms the most wonderful thing he has ever seen. He reports that the cavity is nearly circular in form, sixteen feet in diameter at the top and tapering to ten feet at the water line, which is twenty-six feet from the surface. The water is twenty-five feet deep and seems to be a flowing river, as sticks thrown into it are carried rapidly away by the current. The opening is in prairie land, not near any spring or body of water. Several years ago a farmer in that immediate neighborhood was driving a well, when the tools became detached and lost, but it was thought to be merely a pocket, and no attention was paid to it.

The cavity is gradually enlarging, and Brothers' Death Strangely Coincident. One of the most remarkable coincidences that it has ever been the province of a newspaper to record comes from the lower end of the county. Henry Trumbauer of Ross township, a few miles west of Shickshinny, a farmer, forty-five years old, retired at an early hour on Sunday night in his usual good health, and to all outward appearances never felt better in his life. The next morning his wife was horrified by the discovery of his dead body in bed. He had passed quietly away in the night without a struggle.

POSTMASTER HABT has rather disap pointed his friends by adopting the civil service reform methods of Headsman Clarkson. Four sub-postmasters, in charge of sub-offices in different parts of Boston have had to walk the plank, be-cause they were Democrats, and Repub-licans have been appointed because they licans have been appointed because they were Republicans, and the "cleaning out" process will be continued, it is said, until all appointees not protected by law, will be removed. But probably Postmaster Hart cannot help himself, and has to obey the orders he receives from headquarters. It is only the same principle, however, by which Mr. Hart himself got his appointment, although the excuse was made then that the Postmaster of Boston was really a sort of the excuse was made then that the Post-master of Boston was really a sort of cabinet officer, and so ought to be in sympathy with the administration. Evidently the civil service reform as-sociations need not disband as yet, for lack of missionary work that needs to be done, and the spoils system is still more or less openly followed even by men who ought to be above such corrupt

THE Republican caucuses are called for a week from Saturday evening. The early date will find many voters away from home, but there does not seem to be any very lively interest even among those who are at home, judging from the expressions heard on the street and in the cars; the majority are in favor of Crapo, with an active number who favor It would be an interesting thing to get at the real sentiment of Newton Republicans next week, by having cau-cuses attended by a majority of the vot-ers, but that is probably an "iridescent dream." There will be the usual dozen or twenty faithful ones in each ward, and those who stay at home will do the usual amount of kicking over the result. A half dozen active men in each ward could carry the caucuses in favor of either Crapo or Allen, no matter what the sentiment of the majority of the

HENRY CABOT LODGE undertakes to play the role of a political prophet in the september number of The Forum, in an article on "The Political Issues of 1892;" and he predicts that the most prominent issue in the next presidential campaign will be not the tariff question, but the question of the free coinage of silver. The tariff question has a superficient of the second of the but the question of the free coinage of silver. The tariff question, he maintains, is one that is always with us, and is not settled now, and will not be settled at any early date, but that the agitation of any early date, but that the agitation of the free coinage of silver has now reached so acute a stage that it is not going to pass away before some definite action is taken, and that the popular feeling is such that this is obliged to come to a crisis in the next year's campaign. This is possible, but the probability is that the silver question will be second district. Mr. Rice is chiefly sknown by his enthusiastic devotion to a high tariff, and his extreme views would be of great advantage, of course, in the United States in the political and social

Edward Atkinson has a rather starting article in the Forum, in which he says: The new administration may meet the new Congress on December, 1893, with a report rendered by the Secretary of the Treasury somewhat as follows: With a report rendered by the treasury from taxes and duties upon liquors and tobaccosis now sufficient to cover all the normal expenses of the government, including the army and the uavy, and in addition there's the increase upon the public debt.

It will be incumbent upon Congress, therefore, to make suitable provision only for the amount of revenue which may be necessary to pay pensions, and to contribute to the sinking fund for the uitimate redemption of the public debt, according to law.

A trouble with many enterprises started, is that they Produce nothing, they rest upon no useful thing. The No-SEAM STOCKING COMPANY, offers all of the elements of business—Industrial Comments of the No-SEAM STOCKING COMPANY, offers all of the elements of business—Industrial Company and the production and supply of an old and most universal and stocking—the undertaking will easily rank among the most profitable of all sure business.

No seam, no garter, not a rip or wrinkle, not a thing of nonsense or humbing about it. "It its like the skin—you can't kick it off—you'd never know 'twas on." Re-enforced at the head, oe and knee, and lightened under the joints to avoid chaing, it is durable, comortable and healthful. Every other stocking is made in pieces and of pieces. Here a thread passes into the machine and comes out a stocking substantially ready for use—amply fashioned in the process, with a genius and skill never before imparted to machinery and all more quickly done, than any set of knitted pieces can be wrought into the similar garment, they were designed to compose. This is the unique stocking for Bicycle Elders and Sportsmen.

From the Portland Transcript. A NEW MADONNA.

BY SUSAN HARTLEY

A spring morning was shining in the quaint little Canadian town, and Lucile Morot was looking out into it from the bow window which overlooked the street The priests were pattering over their Ares in the old church opposite. Children were playing on the sidewalks; grandmothers spinning in the doorways.

A scarlet-checked peasaut girl, with a bunch of cowslips in her hand, came tripping briskly along. Then a tall, manly figure appeared in the distance which Lucile watched with great curiosity, and also with a look of admiracurrosity, and also with a look of admita-tion in her dark eyes. Strangers were rare in St. Jean, and this was a young man and handsome, yes, and better still, distinguished looking, the girl decided, as he slowly approached on the other side of the street.
"I wonder who he can be, and if he is going to church," she said to herself.

But she was not left to wonder long, for he immediately crossed the street and stopped at the door directly under the stopped at the door directly under the bow window from which she was gazing. She gave utterance to a little delighted exclamation, and running through a dark passage-way, pushed aside a faded blue curtain which revealed an artist's studio and a middle-aged, dejected look-ing gentleman, who sat dreamily before n untouched canvas.

"Cheer up, tather Morot," she said gayly. "An order for a portrait is coming, I am sure. Such a nice looking young man is at the door. What a fortunate happening, now that my wounded finger prevents me from making flowers."

"You build air castles, Lucile," said father Morot, dismally. "Even if it should be an order for a portrait, how could I execute it now? I am, also, not should be an order for a portrait, how could I execute it now? I am, also, not in a mood for work."

There was no time for Lucile to reply to this, as the stranger was already being ushered into the room. She disappeared behind the blue curtain, but waited to listen to the conversation.

"Ah, papa has the air most distinguished, if he is poor," she thought proudly, as the two gentlemen exchanged polite greetings. "And surely he is the true artist, and his fame will some day be known to all the world.—Poor papa to be hindered so in his youth by such a great family! And then who appreciates art in St. Jean?"

"I have travelled many miles out of my way, sir," said the stranger, "in the hope to induce you to paint a picture for me like the one which my friend, Mr. Robert Disney, has in his gallery at Montreal. I have hardly ever seen a work of art which I admire so much. The face is a miracle of spiritual, and yet tenderlyhuman loveliness. It certainly ought to be the Madonna of the future. May I inquire whether it is a portrait or an ideal?"

"It was—partly a portrait," said father inquire whether it is a portrait or an ideal?"

"It was—partly a portrait," said father Morot, with some embarrassment.

Lucile behind the curtain nearly laughed aloud. "Fancy my portrait as the Madonna of the future," she though is "Whata rare joke! And it was my portrait with only a few lines added to give it a look of maturity and thought. I wonder that father Morot can keep from laughing. He could not, only that sorrow and anxiety have stolen all the mirth from his heart, the dear soul."

And indeed, Lucile's face, when dimpling and sparkling with laughter, and it was very seldom grave in spite of the misfortune of the family, was much more like that of a mischievous sprite than that of a holy Madonna. Nature was in a freak when she fashioned her, giving the girl as many varieties of expression as that which pervaded her own impressive countenance. And each one seemed more beautiful and winning than the other.

"I will gladly paint the picture for her with a somewhat agitated counter

"Why, yes; I see my husband, I see father Morot," said the little lady, with a look of bewilderment.
"Well, you see also a famous artist, little mother. He has just received an order from a gentleman who lives away off in the States, in New York City! for which he is to be paid two hundred pounds."

The poor lady burst into tears. There were tears in father Morot's eyes also, and rather a tremulous smile upon his lips.

Seeing this, Lucile, who had very hard work to choke down a lump which was rising in her own throat, rattled off a perfect chorus of nonsense, at the same time whirling the tearful little mother about the room in a lively waltz.

"The American gentleman, M. Wilmot, saw father Morot's portrait of his own lovely daughter at M. Disney's and was quite charmed with it, and is a young gentleman so handsome and distingue. He should have his picture painted as the angel of the springtime. I felt the inspiration to do it myself."

Father Morot laughed serenely. Poor man l'even this sudden stroke of good fortune had not power to dispel the cloud which hung over him. He had been afflicted with such moods ever since he commenced his career as a painter, moods when he was utterly unable to work when the heaviness of his spirit seemed even to benumb his senses.

But he still believed in himself as an artist, and was sure that under more favorable circumstances he should have already made both a fortune and a name. When he was not in one of his despondent moods, he still hoped for the future. He was barely forty yet, though the father of seven children, Lucile, the oldest, being but eighteen. But alasi these unproductive moods were of more frequent happening, and of longer duration every year. It had been more than four weeks now since he had painted at all, and as poor Lucile, who was usually the main stay, as well as the sunshine of the family, had pricked her finger while making artificial flowers—an art which had been brought over from Paris by her mother—and poisonous matter from one of the colored petals had entered the, tiny wound making it both dangerous and painful, the family were actually in want. But fortunately she was able to resume her work in a few days, and after that, there was always a crust of bread, at least, in the closet.

The long days wore slowly on. The sharp edged northern breezes grew milder as they rang the lilac leaves in the dooryard of St. Jean, but father Morot was still unable to shake off the terrible spell that was upon him. He seated himself in his little studio and waited hour after hour for an inspiration. He tried to coax one by taking long walks when morning was flushing the rugged hills across the liver, or strange sunset "barred with black and yellow like the April bees," painted the pale northern sky.

yellow like the April bees," painted the pale northern sky.

"That Father Morot is going through the world with his eyes bandaged," said the neighbors, (he was called Father Morot by the whole town, as well as by his family, none knew why) watching his slow, languid movements. "Why cannot he see that he is no painter and about some sensible business for the support of his family. Even the old house which belongs to Madame is all going to ruin, and the pretty Lucile, who has skill and industry of a fairy and the goodness of an angel, gives all the movey which she earns at flower-making to buy the bread and butter. She works, works all the time from morning until night. She has never a new gown or a bit of ribbon; she is never able to share in the pleasures of other young people, and she so young. It is a great evil to look upon."

But the pretty Lucile had only one there were a better the said here.

She was quite happy now, and filled with delightful expectations, having no fear that father Morot's inspiration would not come, and the picture be com-pleted at the time appointed. But as weeks went past and his brush was still idle, even she began to entertain misgiv-ings.

She was quite happy now, and filled that of a long Madonan. Nature was in that of a long Madonan. rather Morot appeared with a brighter countenance.

"He is a most kind and generous man, and a perfect enthusiast on the subject of art," he said.

"And he is willing to wait until you finish the picture?"

"Oh, yes, he is delighted with it thus far, and is auxious to see it completed. He is going on a trip up the river and is coming back here in three weeks' time, which will be the twenty-fourth day of the month, and I feel now as if the Lord would enable me to do the work."

But when the twenty-fourth day of the month came the picture was still untouched.

"The gentleman will think Law.

"The gentleman will think I am a cheat and a fraud," said poor father Morot, bitterly, "but all the same I cannot help it. Have I not prayed enough? Have I not striven enough to overcome the spell which is upon me? But if I had only a little more time I could finish my work. I awoke this morning with such an impulse to paint as I have had not had for years."

"Ah, well," said Lucile cheerily, "You may be able to finish it before he arrives, now. He came late on his last visit. And there is a beautiful frame all ready. I could slip the picture in, myself, at the

And there is a beautiful frame all ready. I could slip the picture in, my self, at the last moment."

"At all events, I will try," And father Morot seated himself at his task with a good-will, and though extremely anxions and nervous, made most satisfactory progress with his brush. The house was kept perfectly still. The children hustled off to school or out into the little back garden to play. Madame Morot went over to the church to pray for her husband's success. The robins saug softly in the rustling boughs of the poplar trees by the open window. Lucile, who had remained at home to sit for her father, was almost afraid to breathe for fear of disturbing his happy mood.

But alas! when a little more than a half-hour had passed by, the door-bell rang. Father Morot and Lucile both rose in consternation. Monsieur Lord came early this time.

rose in consternation. Monsieur Lord came early this time.

"But look, father Morot! The picture may be seen, though not quite finished." Lucile exclaimed, as moved by some sudden mad impulse, she flung the canvas upon which her father had been working out of sight behind the door, drew the shades to give a twilight dimness to the room, and in the twinkling of an eye, placed herself hehind the frame which reposed upon a low easel in a remote, but conspicuous corner of the studio. Her beautiful head and shoulders over which was thrown some blue drapery, fitted naturally and easily into the oyal space, and the dark wall near which the easel was situated made a fitting ground-work for the lovely face, which wore its sweetest, tenderest, most Madonnalike expression. And before father Morpt had time to remonstrate the visitor was in the room.

pression. And before rather Morpt had time to remonstrate the visitor was in the room.

"Ah, Monsieur," he began in a tone of dismay. But the eyes of Monsieur had already caught sight of the face upon the easel, and he stood gazing upon it in a perfect rapture of admiration.

"I congratulate you, sir. Such a work of art ought surely to make one's name immortal. It is like Disney's picture, only much more beautiful. This is like life. The eyes are wonderfully expressive and though there is deep sadness and longing in their depths, seem filled with celestial thought."

Poor Lucile! No really dead picture, no statue, had ever been more immovable, more beautifull statuesque [than the pose which she had taken, but father Morot's face which was gazing wildly into her own assumed such an mutterable expression at the mention of the colestial thought, that she was saudenly overcome with the ludierousness of the situation, and in spite of her most agonized efforts, her mouth quivered into a smile, the smooth oval cheeks became dented with dancing dimples, and the deep, sad eyes flashed with mirthful fire. Then a half suppressed laugh rang upon the stillness and the lovely Madonna became a scarlet-beeked maiden, who flying from her position behind the easel, burst into tears and left the room like a flash. Father Morot and Mr. Wilmot stood regarding each other in silence—the

Mrs. Benton called to her husband, who was watching her, and rushing forward she dragged the little girls away from the hole. Mr. Benton arrived just as the snake looked out again to see what had become of them. The farmer's stick fell upon his head and he went back no more. His body was very nearly four feet long. Mrs. Divine fainted when she saw the snake and heard the story, but the children wept and refused to be comforted be-cause their playmate was dead.—Hartford Post.

Among the familiar belongings the face of Robert, the single waiter, is seen no more. Robert is dead. Robert was a waiter among waiters. He never forgot. He knew a thousand customers by sight. He sized personal tastes up by a sort of instinct. He was never effusive, but took your tip graciously. Tips? He made from five to twenty dollars a day, did Robert. He averaged $300 a month and he had a monopoly. But Robert is dead, good fellow, and gone where tips are not recognized. He is not forgotten, however, by any means, for late in the morning, over your Welsh rarebit and toby of ale, you will hear many stories of the dead waiter whose face so long seemed a part of the place.

Maine and Her Mackerel.

The advent of mackerel upon the Maine coast and into its countless little bays occasions great general excitement and a feeling of security against positive want the coming winter. The good people all hasten to salt down a barrel of fish to each family, and with pork and potatoes in the cellar they feel that they can in a measure prepare, like the oft quoted man in Scripture, to "eat, drink and be merry." In these Maine villages visited by the silvery tribe there is an odor of cooking mackerel emanating from every cottage, and the summer ing from every cottage, and the summer visitor may reckon on getting all the fish, and more, that he wants. It is at such times that the boarding house keeper makes something on his people who pay him only a dollar a day.—Boston Herald.

Too Clean to Be Good.

While laboring under the misapprehension that it was counterfeit, the cashier of a large store on Main street refused on Monday to receive a two dolar bill that had merely been disinfected by a judicious use of soapsuds and carbolic acid. The bill was clean, and therefore looked upon with suspicion! Its genuineness was subsequently established by the Charter Oak bank exchanging it for another bill. Would it not be better if storekeepers and the public in general would refuse to receive bills which are so soiled as to suggest at sight the need of disinfection, and accept those the need of disinfection, and accept those that are fit to handle?—Hartford Courant.

WHAT IS

SCROFULA

It is that impurity in the blood, which, accumulating in the glands of the neck, produces unsightly lumps or swellings; which causes painful running sores on the arms, legs, or feet; which developes ulcers in the eyes, ears, or nose, often causing blindness or deafness; which is the origin of pimples, cancrous growths, or the many other manifestadeatness; when is the origin of pimples, can-cerous growths, or the many other manifesta-tions usually ascribed to "humors;" which, fastening upon the lungs, causes consumption and death. Being the most ancient, it is the most general of all diseases or affections, for very few persons are entirely free from it.

The Life of a Wooden Leg.

Judge Bacon has had before him in the Bloomsbury county court an action of an unusual character, the subject of dispute being an artificial leg. The case for the plaintiffs was that the defendant,
Mr. Dearness, a railway clerk, was supplied by them with an artificial leg, the price of which was twenty-five pounds, one-half of which was paid when the limb was delivered. At the time the order was given the de-

the price of which was twenty-five pounds, one-half of which was paid when the limb was delivered. At the time the order was given the defendant was suffering a great deal in consequence of his having for a long time worn a boy's leg.

It was alleged that the leg was a bad fit, and for that reason he refused to pay for it. On cross-examination the plaintiffs denied having guaranteed that the leg would last for seven years. The ordinary life of a leg with ordinary wear and tear would be some years, but how many they could not say. Defendant, who appeared in court wearing the leg, which he offered through his counsel to remove for his honor's inspection, an offer which was not accepted, said the limb was of no use to him, as it hurt him very much, but he was obliged to continue wearing it because he had no other.

He was not a man who could afford a He was not a man who could afford a new leg every year, and he bought this offending limb on the representation that he would be able to wear it with comfort for seven years. Plaintiffs had altered it once or twice, but still it was very uncomfortable, and he now asked to be allowed to give the plaintiffs back their leg and to have his thirteen pounds returned. His honor thought the leg was a good fit and gave judgment for the plaintiffs for the amount claimed, with costs.—Pall Mall Gazette.

A Deer in a City's Streets.

On a recent afternoon a large deer entered the city and made its way through Main street. Men tried to capture it, but without success. Finally it was headed off in front of the postoffice. The animal paused a moment and then jumped over the railing of the bridge into Kenduskeag river. The deer swam gracefully up stream, with several parties in boats and canoes in hot pursuit. They came up with the animal in a short time and one party captured it. It was time and one party captured it. It was thought at first that it had escaped from some deer park, but it was found to be a wild animal, and had been seen on the outskirts of the city earlier in the day.—

The Profits of Bric-a-Brac.

The Profits of Bric-a-Brac.
The grand total realized for the nine days' sale of the Cavendish-Bentinck collection of art furniture was £89,549 9s. The high prices of this sale were extraordinary. The prime cost has been exceeded by nearly cent per cent., and in many instances even larger profits have been obtained. Generally speaking the prices realized show a return of 5 per cent. compound interest on the original outlay.—London Times.

Barred Out a Balloon Weddings

The committee of arrangements of the New England fair met at Secretary Chamberlain's office and decided not to have a marriage ceremony in the bal-loon, as was suggested, as to their minds it would be too sensational. It was decided, however, to give the patrons of the fair all the ballooning they crave, and there will be ascensions with parachute leaps three days of the fair.—Worcester (Mass.) Spy.

An Instantaneous Map of the Sky.

The latest thing in instantaneous photography is the suggestion of a European academy of science that an international conference be held to make arrangements for the elaboration of a photographic map of the heavens, to be simultaneously executed at ten or twelve ob-servatories, widely scattered over the face of the globe.—St. Louis Republic.

When Your Head Is Off.

As human curiosity has never been satisfied as to the precise moment of death in cases of beheading, the account death in cases of beneating, the account of the experiment on a decapitated criminal by a leading scientist of Lyons is of absorbing interest. This time the results are more satisfactory than has hitherto been the case, the doctor making the following statement with regard to the manifestations of consciousness after the head had been separated from to the manifestations of consciousness after the head had been separated from the body: That the head, on being separated from the body, remains in possession of all its faculties, if the hemornage does not pass certain limits. The proportion of oxygen in the blood is sufficient for keeping up the nervous functions for a brief space, never exceeding half a minute. That the repeated opening and closing of the jaws after the separation of the head from the body are nothing but the reflex action common in cases of acute asphyxia.—St. Louis Republic.

A phenomenon was presented in the electric shower which passed over Lee Friday evening. A huge bank of clouds advanced rapidly from the northwest, the edge rolling and stretching in a straight line from northeast to southwest until half of the heavens seemed covered with a monster blanket, when a brilliant fire red light appeared in the northwest directly over the upper part of the village. Everybody thought it was a fire caused by lightning. The apparent flame grew rapidly, and shone upon the black clouds above, and many hurried up town. In five minutes it had spread to an extent which showed it to be a freak of the elements. The shower which followed was not severe, and gave rise to the explantion by the price contents. which followed was not severe, and gave rise to the explanation by the wise one that the unusual sight was caused by the setting sun shining through a thin but compact body of falling water.— Springfield (Mass.) The other offered three dozen for a cent, and the rivalry waxed hotter, until for an hour nice bananas were sold at ten dozen for one cent. Both stores closed out their stocks. Many fruit venders were among the customers at the latter part of the sale.—Philadelphia

A General Dies a Monk

Just thirty years ago General Nicolai, son of the well known embassador, and whose name was once on everybody's lips in connection with the Russian war, mysteriously disappeared. Last week, as Father John Louis, he died at Grande Chartreuse in consequence of an accident, and it turns out that his cell has been given to a nephew of one of the De Broglies, who is known as Father Dom Charles and he had love been believed. Charles, and he had long been believed by his former friends of the Jockey club to be traveling in the interior of Africa.—Buffalo Enquirer.

Warned in a Dream.

A Flushing (L. I.) man had a dream Tuesday night in which he saw his son in the presence of a great danger. The dream seemed so real that when awaknened by the effort he was making to warn his son he could not go to sleep again. He went into the boy's room to find that the lad had left his bed in his sleep and had climbed out on the roof of sleep and had climbed out on the roof of an extension, where he was walking up and down dangerously near the edge.— New York Letter.

This morning about two o'clock, John Wood, the well-known plumber who resides on Main Street, was awakened by hearing glass break. On getting out of bed he received a blow on the head. He immediately grappled with the burglar, and after a terrible struggle succeeded in holding him until his wife obtained help. On being searched at the station, Mr. Wood's watch and wallet was found on his person. He gave the name of Robert Terry. The broken glass proved to be a bottle of Sulphur Bitters which had almost cured Mrs. Wood of rhematism.—Exchange.

Dr. Solomon has cured a cancer on my lip of seventeen vears' standing, it was cut out twice, by what they call eminent surgeons, at intervals of six years, after being cut out each time I knew by the feeling it was still there, and it would be now if I had not been so fortunate as to have Dr. Solomon treat it, he did it without any cutting. I would urge those afflicted with cancer not delay, but to go at once and be cured permanently as I have done. My dear Doctor I thank from the bottom of my heart.

-Efforts are being made to arrange a wrestling match between Michael Horrigan of Newton Upper Falls and Fred Wigmore of New Hampshire. The contest would take place at the picnic to be arranged for Labor Day by the Newton Centre Catholic church society, and as both men are fine wrestlers many hope that arrangements for the match can be made.

-Miss Ella Curtis has gone to North Lubec, Me., where she will remain for R. I., and he played to win, defeating all his opponents until his play with Hobart in the finals on Tuesshy, when he was defeated. There are but few of his friends who will believe that Fred cannot beat Hobart yet, and all are disappointed at the result. There is no question but that Hovey is a better man than Campbell, and he said that he feared Hobari more than he did the champion.

the said that he feared Hobits more than he did the champion.

—A fish story which is vouched for by Henry Hesse is too good to kep and is given as told by the renial expressman. While on his vacation in Nova Scotia recently, Hesse with a suple of friends went to a small ir land bay to tay their skill at captaring a large horse mackerel which had been imprisoned there by some Indians living on the shore. The bay was about 10460 acet in size with a narrow entrance which was closed by poles and brush driven into the mud to brevent the escape of the fish. The three men went out in a boat and for weapons carri is several cel spears, and on sighting the horse mackerel an eel socar was driven into it. The fish dived and came up under the boat, precipitating all the occupants into the water, and when Hesse came up, the fish, which was nearly 10 feet long and probably weighed some 800 pounds, was close to him. He had a knife in his hand with which he stabbed the fish, the pain making the mackerel leap out of the water. It came down on Hesse's back and stunn dhim so that his friends worked over him for one and a half hours before he recovered consciousness. Hesse was so badly hurt that for three days he was unable to get about much. The fish is still allive and in possession of its liberty.

—There came very near being a drown ing accident in the charles River near the Elliot street bridge last Monday afternoon. Thomas Smith strolled across the bridge seemingly in a mood of deliberation and the result of his meditations was soon disclosed by his avowing his intention of walking down the bank into the Charles, and freeing himself from this world of iniquity. He carried his avowal into effect and walked out into the rapidly flowing stream, which fortunately was not very deep here, and wend I his way toward the silk mill dam. These dramatic declarations and acts of his had been observed by a fast increasing crowd of people, and when Mr. Smith began his journey toward the dam and had he d his head under water several times unsuccessfully, a relative of his, Timothy Sullivan by name, thought it time to interfere and went in and aided the unfortunate man ashore. The crowd dispersed.

—Miss Margaret Leary, daughter of Mrs. Jeremiah Leary of Needham, and Mr. James B. Sheridan of Wellesley, were married yesterday morning in St. Mary's church. The bride has filled the position of organist in St. Mary's church for the past five years and is a very pretty and popular young lady with a large circle of frieads. There was a large attendance at the nuptial ceremony. Light mass was celebrated by Rev. T. J. Danahy, who also conducted the mar iage service. The musical numbers were rendered by the church choir. The bride was attended by her maid of honor, Miss Mary A. Leary, and the best man was Mr. Bernard M. Sheridan, brother of the groom. The bride was becomingly gowned in while cream henrietta, with lace garniture. She wore the usual talle veil and a wreath of orange blossoms, and carried a bouquet of bride roses. The maid of honor was attired in an embroidered white lawn costume. After the ceremony a reception for the family and friends was held at the residence of the bride's mother, Central avenue, Needham, where a wedding breakfast was partaken of. The wedding gitts were numerous and valuable, and were displayed in the reception room. At the close of the reception the newly wedded couple departed for Bar Harbør on their wedding tour. Upon their return tney will reside in Wellesley.

Pure is one thing; wholesome, another. Pure arsenic is not wholesome. Pure ammonia, pure white clay, or pure alum cannot make a wholesome baking powder, even if it is called "absolutely pure."

Every housekeeper knows that pure cream of tartar, pure soda, pure flour, are wholesome. These three ingredients, and these three only, are used in Cleve-land's Baking Powder. Cleveland's is pure and wholesome; it leavens most, and leavens best, but its special excellence is that it is perfectly wholesome.

An Amusing State of Affairs.

A novel boycott is reported from Tenville, a village in Georgia. It came about in this way: Some days ago a young beau bosted that he could call on any girl in town at will, they were all so anxious for his company. The next evening he was informed by a young lady whose company he had solicited that she had a previous engagement. She appeared at the entertainment that evening with a fourteen-year-old boy. In some way the rejected beau gained the sympathy of the young men of the town, while the young lady's pluck was indorsed by those of her own sex.

The young men held a meeting and resolved to discontinue all calls on girls of their acquaintance. Not to be outdone, the girls called a meeting and decided to scratch the names of the boycotters off their visiting lists. The result is that young men from the neighboring towns are becoming favorites with the Tenville girls, while the natives are sitting around under the shade trees plotting revenge.—Exchange.

A New Find at Milo.

Milo, the island of the Cyclades in which the famous Venus of Milo was discovered, has again been the scene of the unearthing of a splendid example of ancient Hellenic art. The new "find" is the marble statue of a boxer, somewhat above life size, which is almost as perfect after its burial under the dust of centuries as it was when it came fresh centuries as it was when it came fresh from the hands of its sculptor. The statue has been shipped to Athens, where a commission of Greek archaeologists, aided by some members of the German Archaeological institute in Athens, will secret more the period of its crigin and report upon the period of its origin and its probable creator.—Pall Mall Gazette.
